By HENRY TANNER

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Dec. 26 - Two months after an Arah leaders' conference imposed a cease-fire on the opposing factions in Lebanon, the issues that caused 19 months of violence remain unresolved.

President Elias Sarkis, who has to rely on 30,100 Syrian troops to enforce a mininum of law and order, installed a Cahinet of technocrats that obtained from Parliament the right to govern by decree forsix months.

But the Syrian Army is only on the main roads and in key places, and ever; 🕏 day has its share of violence, even though the mass killing has stopped. Anti-Syrian Palestinian commandos are being tracked down by Syrian-controlled groups.

Artillery Duels Reported

Raymond Edde, the unsuccessful presidential candidate who is Syria's most vocal critic, has been fired upon twice and the automobiles of Christian and Moslem political figures have been dynanuted. Today there were reports of artillery duels in the south between rightist Christians and Palestinians.

In the Moslem and Christian neighbor boods, men with rifles continue to patrol the streets at night, searching cars and making sure that no suspect straoger gets through. By day, gunmen in civilian Threat of Strife Over Separatism clothes—their weapons discreetly hidden -man unobtrusive roadblocks.

Members of the Phalangists, the principal rightist Christian militia force, still draw their moothly pay of about $120, whether or not they are on active duty. And the Mourabitoun, the leftist Moslein militiamen, still draw their $100 a month.

The Divisions Have Deepened The two communities still do not really mix. The de facto partition that began deepened since the guns fell silent.

Symbolically, at two of the deadliest spots on the old front line-the Place des Canons in the sbattered commercial center, and the Museum, which was the only crossing point—a few dozen cab drivers and fruit and vegetable peddiers have set up shop amid the ruins.

They offer their business noisily to both sides, under the watchful eye of Syrian soldiers in tanks. At nightfull a strict curfew is enforced, and the drivers and peddiers disappear. Theirs is one of the few integrated business activities.

Beer and arak, the popular absinthe-like drink, are again abundant in Moslem-controlled west Beirut, coming over daily from the Christian eastern sector.

Cooperation for Business

The newspapers are full of advertisements from retail stores in the Moslemcontrolled Hamra district, announcing the : Its Own Missile openings of new branches on the Christian side. In many cases, this means that the Christian-owned store has moved to the east and that a new Moslem owner will carry on in the west.

Just last week, the International Commission of Jurists, a widely respected human rights groop based in Geneva, charged that at least six Latin American countries-Brazil, Chile, Uruguny, Argen tina, Bolivia and Paraguay—had institu-tionalized repression and destroyed basic human rights. Similar strong condemnations have been made by the Roman Catholic Church in various Latin Ameri-can countries.

But human rights initiatives by the Carter administration could be stalled because of the overwhelming predominance in Latin America of authoritarian regimes that can jointly resist such pressure, and also because of widespread cynicism over Inited States claims to moral leadership.

Mr. Carter may find it difficult to mao a forceful human rights strategy that coherently answers such questions as these now being raised by Latin American government officials and other political observers:

A French Town Is Battling the Auto With Bicycles

Several months ago the amhitious Mayor, Michel Crepeau, put 250 bright yellow bikes, which the municipality had purchased, at the disposal of the public, free of charge, as part of his persistent campaign to give the resi-dents more legroom and breathing space. His efforts to keep his town a pleasant place to live include a pedestrian shopping malt and plans to heat over 800 apartments with solar energy. Social Status and Swine

The favorite project is the bicycles, and if the Mayor is not La Rochelle's easiest rider, be is its most noticeable and vocal one. "The automobile must be desanctified." Mr. Crépeau said as be mounted a bike and went a few yards for an exemplary, if wobbly, ride along a quay. Fishermen watched, smiling as if they would be amused if he veered and fell in the water.

Dismounting, the 46-year-old Mr. Crépeau, one of the leaders of the small but active Rádical Left Party in France, added: "When people use the automobile for necessary transportation, that bile for necessary transportation, that is one thing. But when a man uses it is a sign of social status, that is sumething else. Then there are also those people who become swine when they get in their cars."

Mr. Crepeau, who does not deny that, as a Mayor, National Assembly Deputy and party leader, he is ready to accept a higher place in French politics explained how the bicycle campaign had been going. Of the 250 originally placed on the streets for daylight use, 30 have been stolen and dozens more bent and broken. Still, he said, another 250 will be been to be the said.

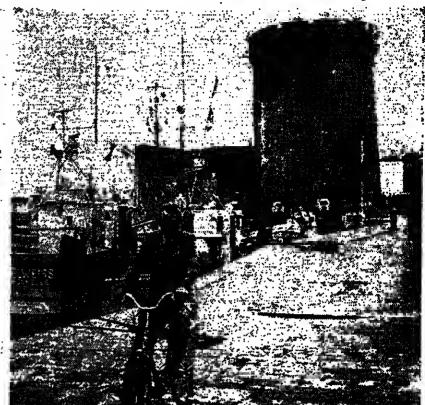

broken. Still, he said, another 250 will be bought, partly subsidized by the national Government; they will be sturdier and will have signal lights and reflectors so they can be used after dark. "Oh yes, the bicycles," a young woman said in a separate conversation. "They are a good idea, but try and find one. People have ruined them." Still, even without the have a reconfigure without the have a reconfigure to personify the campaign, visitors onto personify the campaign, visitors oc-ticed several hicycles being used by residents for shopping or for trips to a waterfront cale.

New Paving and Recorded Music

The Mayor, who usually drives a car or is driven on his daily round of the city, took visitors on a walk through the area of the pedestrian mall—six narrow old streets closed to traffic and where recorded music replaces auto sounds.

mall. Gesturing at the crowds doing Christmas shopping or going on their daily tasks. Mr. Crepeau said that merchants were apprehensive about the mall but had found that the value of their businesses had doubled in a year. By the spring, Mr. Crépeau said, 830 apartments in the city will get most of their hot water from a solar apparatus developed, with public subsidies, by a local fuel dealer. "The dealer will say 50 percent of the dealer. er will save 50 percent of the develop-ment cost," the Mayor said, "and the consumers will save 15 percent on their water bills."

Another of Mr. Crépeau's innovations, revolutionary for France, is the separate collection of different kinds of garbage on different days. The city sells some of it for a few cents a pound. "It was difficult to get people accustomed to it." the Mayor said, "so we used the children in a campaign to bring empty plastic mineral-water bottles to school. Eventually their parents said O.K., and now we even make a little money out of our garbage."

Most People Are Hutus

The bulk of the population, peasants of the Hutu tribe, overthrew the feudal domination by the minority Tutsi tribe ooly 13 years ago. The ferment of that revolt has continued. Now, throughout the country, groups of men and women can be seen everywhere building schools, clinics and repairing roads. They are part of a national movement of workers who cootribute a day's labor each week for community projects.

Despite the enthusiasm and solidarity, it is clear that for Rwanda the principle of self-reliance is even more limited than the principle of justice. Less than 10 percent of the population is in a cash economy. The rest subsist on beans and banana beer. Only 10 percent are thought to be illterate. Virtually all available land is under cuttivation though the land is badly eroded and starved through overplanting. VIOLENCE PERSISTING AFTER LEBANON WAR

Beirut, has opened new medical and law departments and other new facilities in the east so that Christian students can go to school there while Moslem students remain where they are.

Construction of a new international airport, started in the Christian-held area during the fighting, is being pursued at top speed and its builders predict it will be in operation before the new year is out. A smaller airstrip is under construction in the Moslem-held southern part of Lebanon.

Both Faiths Cross the Front Lines

Lebanese families of both faiths now cross the old front lines, often simply to gawk at the destroyed buildings on the other side. But they do not leave the main roads, where the Syrians have their roadblocks, and often they do not leave their roadblocks.

Businessmen now are beginning to look up old acquaintances and business partners on the opposing side, but when they cross the lines they go to specific places where they know they are welcome, and then return home.

While the mass killing has stopped, every day has its violence. But, unlike previous cease-fires, this one did not bring a rash of kidnappings and revenge kilings. One reason is the caution with which the two communities stay apart. The other is the fact that the Syrians, early on, amounced that they would execute on the spot any kidnapper they chight.

Political Debate Is Muffled

After Parliament voted the Government emergency powers last Friday, many political leaders announced that they would take vacations abroad or in their home villages. This is thought to have pleased President Sarkis, a self-effacing man who hates publicity and does not like to talk to journalists. He has all but ended political debate in the country, at least for the time being the time being.

He is known to be intent on avoiding a repetition of the events of last January and February, when the Syrians and former President Suleiman Franjieh worked out a modest reform project that would have changed some of the aspects of Lebanon's religious-based political system by giving the Moslems parity in votes in Parliament.

The program was submitted to the political leaders for discussion, and neither the Christians nor the Moslems liked it. "This is not what thousands of people have dled for," was the cry from both factions. As the controversy dragged, the war began again.

Now, with a total of 60,000 people killed in the fighting, according to official beanese estimates, no reform measure could possibly be enough psychologically or politically, if it were submitted to public debate.

Press Censorship Expected

Mr. Sarkis's next step is expected to be a law putting the Lebanese press, at one time by far the freest and most unruly in the Arab world, under Government censorship.

ment censorship.

Once censorship is established, some, if not all, of the newspapers that bave been closed down and their plants occuried by the Syrian Army in the last two veeks will be permitted to print again. "After being closed outright," an editor ald bitterly, "we will regard censorship as a victory for freedom of the press."

Mr. Sarkis is working quietly and without publicity at the task of rebuilding national police and a national army.

Police Presence, Army Rifts

The army remains divided. The Lebaese Arab Army, the breakaway Moslem tranch created by Lieut. Ahmed Khatib almost a year ago, maintains its indeondence in the southern part of the puntry. The Phalange, which attracted dany former army officers, remains an independent militia force in the Christian reas. Its leaders have served notice that hey do not plan to disband it.

1,000 Comorians Dead In Madagascar Clashes

MORONI, Compro Islands, Dec. 26 (Agence France-Presse)—One thnusand Commians were killed and 1,000 injured, many seriously, in communal fighting last week in the Majunga region of northwest Madagascar.

Fnreign Minister Abdallah Mouzanir of the Comoro Islands annunced the fig-ures on the state radio on his return from Madagascar at the head of a seven-man delegatinn, that investigated the fighting between the Malagasy and Cumurian immigrants.

The figures were confirmed by travelers who arrived here from the Indian Ocean island about 100 miles aouthwest

A state of emergency has been declared in the Majunga region, and Comorians living there bave fled to three Government camps for protection.

800 Blacks, Still on Strike. Remain in Rhodesia Jail

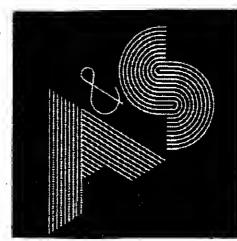

SALISBURY, Rhodesia, Dec. 26 (Reuters)—Nearly 800 black bus workers spent their third day in prison today after beginning a strike Christmas Eve that paralyzed Salisbury's public transit

A spokesman for the bus company said 74 of 870 strikers arrested at first had agreed to return to work and had been freed. He said the 796 remaining would appear in court Tuesday if they did nnt agree to end the strike. The striking drivers, cooductors and maintenance unrkers are demanding a higher Christ-

The men are being held at Cbikurubi Prison 10 miles outside Salisbury. They were arrested under emergency regulations that cover strikes affecting major public services.

LAND REFORM BATTLE LIVELY IN PORTUGAL

Socialist Government Encourages Independent Cooperatives in Bid to - End Red Control of Program

By MARVINE HOWE

ial to The New York Times BALEISAO, Portugal Dec. 22-A score of farm workers have quietly set up at independent, prosperous cooperative here, a few miles outside of Beja, in a direct challege to the Communists who dominate the erea.

The Fonte de Frades, or Friars Fountain Cooperative is a pioneer in the movement to form independent farm cooperatives in the southern Alentejo Province, the main Communist atronghold. There are now about 60 such cooperatives in the Beja district, most of which have seceded from the large Communist-controlled state farms in recent months.

"We pulled out of the collective farm because the .Communist union was running the show and badly, and we know we can do better on our own," said Jose Fialho da Silva, a member of the Fonte de Frades cooperative.

The Socialist Government of Prime Minister Mário Soares is encouraging the independent cooperatives in an attempt to break the Communist Party's hold over Portugal's young land-reform program.

"Second Agrarian Reform"

"Portugal has begun its second agrarian reform," said the new Socialist Minister of Agriculture, António Barreto, in a nationwide address earlier this month. He said that the main task oow was to free the Alentejo from its "new landlords, the Communist Party and its unions."

Mr. Barreto emphasized that while there heve been many positive results under the land reform, it has been car-ried out hastily and inefficiently, leading to "errors and grave distortions that must be corrected."

The land reform is one of the most important achievements of the 1974 revolution. In southern Portugal, more than 2,250,000 acres, mostly large holdings, have been selzed and turned into collectives and cooperatives. The north and center, traditionally small farm areas, have not been affected .

The Communist Party took control of the reform operation at the outset through its powerful farm-workers unions and its sympathizers in the early revolutionary provisional governments. In July 1975, the Communists pushed through their agrarian-reform law, which legal-ized most of the land seizures and ruled that a farmer could not own land with more than 50,000 points, a system based on type of soil, location and equipment.

Law Not Always Respected But in many cases the lew was not respected. Small and medium farms were taken over, often with the support of the Communist unions. And the old land owners were not promised compensation or reserve lands.

When the Socialist Party, which won the country's first free legislative elec-tions, formed the Government five months ego. Mr. Soares pledged to end the abuses in the agrarian program. When the Minister of Agriculture, Antómo Lópes Cardosa, e left-wing Socialist, showed reluctance to clamp down on the Communist farm workers union, he was

The new minister, Mr. Barreto, has declared that "the law must be respected," and has backed his words with firm measures. When farm workers objected to the return of illegally occupied lands for reserve lands to the original owners, Mr. Barreto called out troops to enforce

When farm workers last week refused to obey national guardsmen and threat-ened to invade one of the newly returned properties, five of their leaders were or dered to face trial.

Aim Is Democratic System

Manuel Alegre, Socialist Secretary of Information, said in a recent interview that the Government's position was that the reform program must be continued but on different, democratic lines. He said in the Alentejo so that the farmers could decide whether they wanted to stay on the large collective farms, form cooperatives or receive small plots of land.

The question remains how much of the Alentejo wants to be "liberated" from the Communist Party and its union. The Alentejanos voted heavily for the Communists in this month's local elections The Communists won the Beje and Evora elections with more than 47 percent of the vote in each district while the Socielist count was 39 percent in Beja and 34 percent in Evora.

Prime Minister Sources commented: "They voted Communist because they were ordered to do so; when they see there's a democratic alternative, they won't vote Communist anymore. A recent tour of the Evora and Beja districts showed deep divisions and high teosion. A struggle is going on, with the main forces in conflict being the big collective estates run by the Communist farm workers union, the smaller cooperatives and the former land owners who still have hopes of recovering their lands. It is not a violent war because the Portuguese are essentially a peaceful people Mevertheless it is e quiet, determined struggle for the Alentejo.

Issue and Debate

Court to Rule in College Admissions Case

By GENE L MAEROFF
The cootroversy that has been raging during the 1970's over the existence of special admissions programs to bring more blacks and other minprity members into higher education may be resolved soon. At stake is the question of whether colleges and universities should judge minority applicants by standards identical to those applied to whites or whether the institutions may broaden Their range of consideration to assure the entrance of students who would not meet the usual criteria.

- The issue bas been placed before The United States Supreme Court in a case involving a 36-year-old white engineer, Allan Bakke, who wanted to besome a physician, but was twice re-Jected by the medical school at the University of California's Davis cam-

Mr. Bakke, who has already won a verdict in his favor from the California Supreme Court, charges that he was discriminated against in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitu-

Davis's medical school, which has appealed the lower court decisioo. reserves 16 of the 100 places in its freshman class for members of minority groups, Mr. Bakke maiotains that he was better qualified for admission than some of the minority students who entered the institution through the special program.

The Background

Most efforts to raise the enrollment of minority-group students in the country's predominantly white colleges and universities grew out of white America's shock and self-reproach after the assassication in the spring of 1968 of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Classes had already been selected for the fall of 1968, but there were sharp increases in the number of blacks and other minority students to the entering classes of 1969.

Institutions of higher education began the vigorous recruitment of minority students, financial aid was ineased, remedial courses were added for underprepared entrants and counselors were hired. A key element in the new approach was the widening of admissions criteria so that applicants from groups that had been discriminated against would not be automatically excluded on the basis of low grades or poor scores oo en-

The impact of the altered policies was such that the oumber of black cyliege and university students grew from 370,000 in 1967 to 948,000 in 1975, according to the Bureau of the Census.

Unlike the affirmative action program that the Federal Government resulted for the centeral forms.

quired for the employment of more minority-group members on university faculties and in administrations, the efforts to eoroll more students from minority groups were voluntarily pur-sued by the institutions and rot man-dated by Washington.

Contary to popular miscooception, there is no formal system of oenalties—such as a cutoff of funds—that the Federal Government has authorized to compel colleges and universities to seek more minority students.

But the Internal Revenue Service and the Office of Civil Rights of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare have not too subtly reminded institutions of higher education that there are measures that can be taken against them if it is shown they have discriminated against ethnic groups.

Some of the country's most respected colleges and universities, including those of the Ivy League, bave led the way in pledging to locrease the proportion of minority-group members in their student bodies.

Medical schools and law schools have also been in the forefront of the movement, the Association of American Medical Colleges having set a goal of trying to reach a 12 percent minoritygroup enrollment.

Not Acceptable to All

But the idea of special treatment for minority applicants simply because of their ethnic identity is oot acceptable

Until now, the most notable legal challenge to the concept was a suit brought by Marco DeFunis, a white applicant who was denied admission to the law school at the University of Washington. Thirty-six of the 44 minority applicants accepted by the school had worse grades and lower entrance test scores than Mr. DeFunis.

The case reached the United States Supreme Court, but did not lead to a resolution of the special admissions issue because the Court declared the case moot. Mr. DeFuois had aiready gotten into the law school on an order from a lower court.

Now, the Bakke case has put the issue back in the hands of the Supreme

The Case for Special Admissions

"It would be most unwise to take a question where there are differences of opinion of this kind," Derek C. Bok, the president of Harvard University, said recently of the Bakke case, "and sub-ject it to a uniform, rigid rule for all institutions imposed by judges who, good as they are, do not have intimate first-hand experience in the nuances and subtleties of the admissions proc-

Advocates of special admissions programs maintain that judging candidates strictly on the basis of their grade point averages and entrance test scores is unfair to students who have promise that has not been displayed in traditional ways.

They say that the approach they favor does not meao taking in unqualified students, but simply giving additional weight to other factors—recom-mendations, motivation and leadership, for example.

Minority-group students are not the first ones to get special coosideration from admissions officers. Most colleges and universities have for many years accepted some students such as athletes, musicians for the marching bands aod children of alumni who might not have gotten in on academic creden-tials alone.

There is oo one plan used by all institutions of bigher education for increasing minority enrollments and few bave been as explicit as the medical school at Davis in spelling out quotas.

In fact, those who back special admissions regret that the court test will be based oo the Davis plan, which they consider an atypical approach and a

Supporters of special admissions programs say the concept is justified if for no other reason than by the fact that the professions and careers open to college-educated Americans do not reflect the same minority group's proportion of the population

The Case Against Special Admissions

The gist of the opposition to special admissions programs is the contention that they represent "reverse discrimination" against whites, giving preference to blacks and other groups merely for ethnic reasons.

"The argument that a racial classification which discriminates against white people is oot inherently suspect implies that the white majority is monolithic and so politically powerful as not to require the constitutional safe-guards afforded minority racial groups," said Larry M. Lavinsky, a New York lawyer who is national chairman of the civil rights division of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Many of the critics of the current special admissions programs, including the Anti-Defamation League, assert that if there is to be a category of candidates singled out for extra con-sideration, the criterion should be ecocomic disadvantagement so that whites as well as blacks can qualify.
Standards Believed Lower

The feeling is widespread among op-ponents of the current special admis-sions programs that the approach has led to a lowering of standards. They contend that in an attempt to enlarge their minority enrollments, colleges and universities have accepted and retained students—at the undergraduate, graduate and professional levels—who cannot do the required work.

The Outlook

The impact of a Supreme Court ruling io the Bakke case would depend on how widely it is applied to the admissions process.

Approval of the University of California's quota system, which is considered an unlikely prospect, would en-courage more institutions of bigher children to operate openly in a way that awards admissions preference along ethnic lines.

If the court decides to allow quotas, but says that they must not be ethnicly exclusive, theo colleges and universities can be expected to adopt admis-sions policies that aid the economically disadvantaged of all ethnic groups.

It is by no means clear, though, what effect a verdict banning quotas would have because most institutions maintain that their special admissions programs involve flexibility, not quotas. The Shape Shop semi-annual Bras, girdles, and panty girdles in current styles, starting taday!

Fight Over Daley's Power Reported to Have Led To Deal That Shares Rule and Excludes Blacks

scaffold, producing a noise that almost drowned Mr. Frost out. By week's end, such maneuvers seemed unnecessary, for it was widely reported that a deal had been struck to corve up the power. On Tuesday, Alderman Michael J. Bilandic would be voted in as Acting Mayor by the Council and the two top aldermanic posts—the chairmanships of the Finance and Zoning Committees—would pass to other white aldermen. The blacks were dealt out completely.

The city's small Irish population, to the frustration of other ethnic groups and minorities, is trying to maintain its hegemony. Political experts predict that the Irish will have to give up one of the two posts held, by Mayor Daley.

The Dally News and The Sun-Times have editorially andorsed a splitting of the positions with the party chairman.

as Acting Mayor until an election was held, within six mooths, to choose a Mayor to serve the two years remaining in Mr. Daley's term.

No single person is expected to hold both of Mr. Daley's major offices—Mayor and chairman of the Cook County Democratic Central Committee. No one will wield the power that he did.

It seemed not to have occurred to Mr. Frost and others who want the interim position to seek a judicial opinion on their status, although the Chicago Bar Association, most of whose members are black lawyers, threatened yesterday to go to court if Mr. Frost was not elected Acting. Mayor on Tuesday.

The oews media have not moved quickly to clarify the matter, either, or to question whether appointed aides were empowered to administer the government or try to circumvent the racial confrontation that was brewing.

Indeed, after Mr. Frost amounced his news conference two television news an-chormen expressed shock that blacks ap-parently planned to "take over the Mayor's office."

There was widespread acceptance here the University of Himois, feels there will be the Mayor's style of his personally be a settling down after the initial blood-handling all problems. Crucial to his letting.

would pass to other white aldermen. The blacks were dealt out completely.

That is the Chicago way, part of the legacy left by the death last Monday of Mayor Daley, who controlled the city for more than two decades.

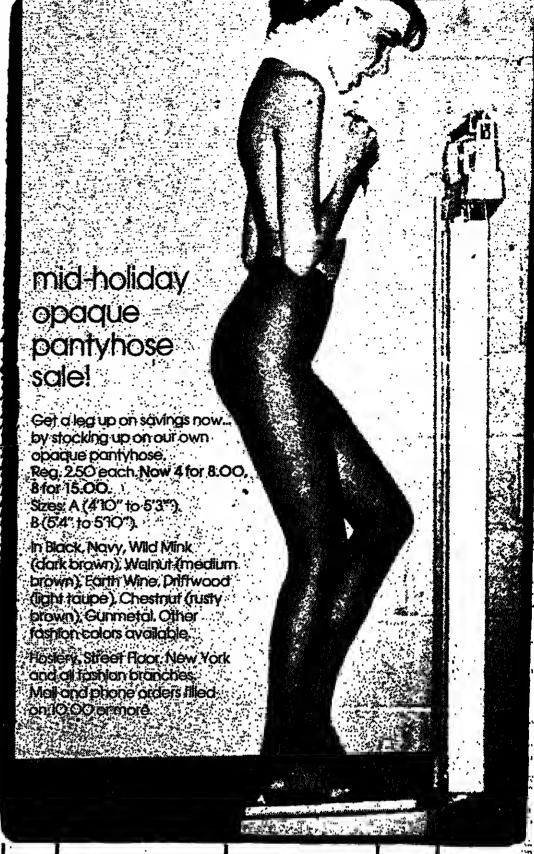

Internecine scrambling was predictable, for Mr. Daley left no line of succession and he had ruled a Democratic Party that dared not act without his approval. That scrambling is the kind of event that led Mike Royko, the columnist for the Chicago Daily News, to suggest that the city's motto be changed from "Urbs in Horto" (City in a Garden) to "Ubi est Meus" (where's mine?):

As the white aldermen were dividing the power, blacks were fighting for the temporary position of Acting Mayor until the Council election on Tuesday. The person picked then would serve as Acting Mayor until an election was a facting Mayor until the council election on Tuesday. The person picked then would serve as Acting Mayor until an election was a facting Mayor until an election was a facting Mayor until the council election on Tuesday. The person picked then would serve as Acting Mayor until an election was a facting Mayor until the council election on Tuesday. The person picked then would serve the positions, with the party chairman, ship going to en Irishman, George W. Dunne, president of the Cook County Board of Supervisors, and Mr. Frost would project two Croatians, Mr. Bilandic and Alderman Edward R. Vdolyak, and another Irishman, Alderman Edward R. Vdolyak, and another Irishman Party Row Croatians, Mr. Bilandic and Alderman Edward R. Vdolyak, and an black vote could be the determining fac-tor in the election.

Ultimately, some figure outside the power blocs oow battling for power could emerge. One of these figures is Edward V. Hanrahan, former State's Attorney who figured in the incident involving the deaths of two Black Panthers in 1969 and consequently was rejected by black voters. Another is former Alderman William Singer, who lost to Mayor Daley last year and could attract a sizable black vote. In a contest with five or six person either man could be a good posibility.

However it thrus out, there is coocern about the future of the city now that its father figure is gone. The assessments of Mr. Daley range from those who have questioned his accomplishments, such as Mr. Royko, to those who feel his greatoess is intact, such as the Rev. Andrew Greeley, a Roman Catholic priest who is a columnist for the Tribune The last Mayor was not of the 19th Century, as some believe, said Father Greeley, but of the 21st Century.

A New Beginning: Education ...

Education and liberty habitually get short shrift in allegedly realistic discussions of the nation's current

In all the recent frantic speculation about who will be who in the new Administration, there seemed little evidence of concern about policies designed to make the nation wiser and to keep it free. The majority of voters, and the politicians they elected, appear oblivious of Jeiferson's warning that "if a nation expects to be ignorant and free . . . it expects what never was and what

Yet ignorance, and even illiteracy, persist; a society adrift in economic and ethical uncertainty more than ever needs the educational "balance wheel," as Horace Mann termed it. No nation can geograte the skills necessary to individual and national fulfillment without assigning to education a central role; only a people insufficiently sure of its rights could have allowed so many violations of those rights by Government agents posing as freedom's protectors.

Support of education offers a special opportunity for a new Administration that wants to prove its concern for people. Lack of such concern, characteristic of the Nixoo and Ford years, bas seriously infected the population at large. Anger over high taxes has found an outlet in votes against school budgets, usually the only levies on which taxpayers are allowed to vote at all. A reas of early school closings for lack of funds bas indicated education's low place on the national agenda. Surely this country is not so destitute that it cannot afford to keep the schools open.

in the absence of inspired leadership both in Washington and within education itself, public doubts have grown about the schools' and the colleges' effectiveness. Failure to reorganize and reform educational institutions has persuaded many of education's potential supporters that additional funds are too readily swallowed up by the same flawed programs and by the same insufficiently responsive teaching staffs. Federal, state and local programs have not provided adequate assurance that children's interests will be placed above those of the profes-

These problems cry out for resolution through joint action by educators and political leaders. The Government's first duty is to disavow publicly the past eight years' Federal scenario of exploiting public disinterest in education rather than dispelling it. The Government needs egein to support successful old programs and promising new ones rather than rationalize its withdrawal with the argument that "nothing really

High on the list of priorities ought to be the following

Restoring the Johnson Administration's commitment to the education of the disodvantaged. Deliberate efforts to discredit all compensatory education have caused a retreat from sound social goals as well as from sound pedagogy. Project Head Start died not of educational failure but of fiscal starvation. While much lip service was given to the attack on reading failure, little was done to redepley educational resources and staffs to insure the success of such a strategy.

Reaffirming a notional commitment to access to higher education. The recent recession, together with skyrocketing tuition, has begun to restrict such access not only for the poor but for a growing segment of the moderateincome middle class. The Federal Government can reverse that trend by more generous funding of the entitlement grants for college students and hy providing cost-ofeducation subsidies to the institutions in which these students are enrolled.

• Putting an end to higher education's identity crisis. The Federal Government, by rediscovering the nation's campuses as a major resource in tackling economic. social and technological problems, can help the universities to regain a sense of purpose.

At present, there are acute danger signs that the intellectual cutting edge, particularly of the great research universities, is being dulled. This undermines the nation's capacity to deal with present needs and future plans. Though less visible, it is even more serious than the erosion of industrial capacity; it erodes the capacity of tomorrow's industry, science, technology and cre-educated populace can lose its liberty by becoming too complacent about it. With democracy's perimeter and influence shrinking all over the globe, its defense in the United States may determine its survival any-

While Watergate put the extreme disregard of civil liberties in sharp public focus, there are strong indications that the very drama of that episode may already have blurred the public's vision of risks that transcend the case of the Nixon White House.

The issues still to be resulved cover the entire complex. mechanism of Government and its relationship to the rights of each individual citizen, Among the key problems which call for a new beginning are:

· Pernicious growth of clondestine surveillance. The abuses that came to light during the Nixon years were only the culmination of a trend set in motion by the distortions of internal security that started in the Cold War Era, Indeed, it is outlious whether Nixon's plumbers. the F.B.L burglaries, the C.I.A. assassination plots, the enemy lists and the epidemic of wiretaps and surreptitiously taped conversations would have been possible if the nation had not become immunized to the idea that objectionable means can be justified by lofty aims.

Attorney General Edward Levi has made a commendable start in curbing the domestic intelligence agencies: but the recent lobbying efforts by high-ranking intelligence spokesmen to relax the Justice Department's controls shows that the battle is lar from won. Mr. Levi's personal defense of the people's constitutional rights is inadequate insurance against future abuses. Nothing -00-2 of far stricter legislative barriers against the use of posice-state security methods can provide such

· Lack of control over foreign intelligence activism. Congressional investigations of C.I.A. activities have exposed the problem; strong preventive action must be taken to avoid recurrence of similar incidents, especially since multinational corporations so often seek C.I.A. support for their real or imagined interests abroad. Fiscal control over intelligence activities is crucial. The very existence of an "intelligence community" acting as though it were an independent governmental apparatus threatens to distort American foreign and military

As the history of this century demonstrates, even an policies, and to jeopardize democratic control of these Avoilability of Government dossiers for political purposes. Despite a promising beginning, much remains to be done to iosulate the files of the F.B.I., the C.I.A. and the Internal Revenue Service against improper use by the White House or other executive agencies. Government computers bave a sinister potential unequaled by any old-fashioned tool of the state's police power to limit the citizen's privacy. Until they are effectively brought under control, they will eventually triumph over the Bill of Rights.

· Foilure to define the tenure of key intelligence ond police officiols. The dismal consequences of J. Edgar Hoover's long reign at the F.B.I. are still too readily rationalized as the hold of merely one legendary personality over Presidential and public opinion. The real problem has its roots in the corruptibility of human nature. There is a continuing danger of the power of a secret super-government, whether the power that flows from intelligence files is wielded by one colorful director or by a permanent intelligence hierarchy. That danger is best reduced by the snort-term tenure of able, independeot directors.

There are risks in such efforts to limit the powers of the domestic and foreign intelligeoce apparatus. Efficiency in intelligence operations is essential in a world of unpredictable and irresponsible foreign opponents: effective investigative police operations at home are essential protections against organized crime, individual and corporate lawlessness and political subversion.

Yet the risks of leashing the intelligence forces are far less serious than is often claimed. Effective intelligence operations depend far more on intelligent research and vigilant law-enforcement than on cloak and dagger exploits and clandestine plotting. The courts can be trusted to approve of any application for the legal use of wiretaps that can be justified in the interest of domestic or foreign security.

The risks that remain are the risks a free people must take to prevent its basic freedoms from being traded away against the spurious promise of absolute security, which inevitably results in the suffocation of

Tension in Poland

Poland's Communist regime and its protectors in Moscow am showing signs of feeling under pressure from rising discontent. The Kremlin recently granted Polish party chief Edward Gierek new credits reportedly worth almost $1.5 billion. Poland's Communists have announced a major cutback in planned investment expenditures. ---fessing this has oeen forced by the need to import large quantities of food. And in a major speech earlier this month. Mr. Gierek called on the Polish nation for patience and discipline, scolded his party's members for their passivity and bureaucratic attitudes, and warned of the impact of Western propaganda.

Mr. Gierek is troubled because a united from seems to be spontaneously arising in Poland, one seeking to create a legal and effective opposition to the ruling Communists. Coming together in this movement are workers, intellectuals and the Roman Catholic Church, all united io resentment agains: political oppression and economic hardships. The roots of this movement go back to last June's succeasful working class revolt against Mr. Gierek's program of sharp price increases. Forced to abandon the price increases, the Polish regime has since been busily punishing many workers who publicly protested and helped compel Warsaw's retreat

Now Poland's outstanding intellectuals have organized to help the workers who have been jailed or fired. The Catholic Church has also entered the campaign to raise funds for the persecuted workers and their families. Rank and file workers, too, are protesting against the regime's vengeance. As these tensions rise, it would not be surprising if the Kremlin begins to consider sacrificing Mr. Gierek-as Władysław Gomulka was sacrificed in 1970-to calm Polish anger before it explodes.

Amtrak: Improved but High-Priced

To the Editor:

I read with interest your Dec. 10 editorial praising Amtrak for its improved equipment and performance. It is true that American rail passengers -what few there are-are "again riding in a style to which they were no longer eccustomed, unless they happened to travel by rail abroad." This is, as your editorial pointed out, a hearteoing sign. It would be more impressive, however, if the taxpaper were not paying so dear a price for the improvements.

Amtrak ridership in 1975, measured in total passenger miles, showed moderate increases over 1973 figures. though they did not measure up to the high levels achieved during the oil embargo in 1974.

Operating deficits, on the other hand, continued to grow. While Amtrak's total revenues fell 2 percent from 1974 to 1975, operatiog expenses grew by 15 percent. Amtrak's operating deficit to 1975 was $352 million, an increase of $80 million over 1974. Federal operating subsidies to Amtrak will total $378 million in fiscal 1977 alooe. The Federal Government now pays 55 perceot of the price of every Amtrak ticket. In addition to operating subsidies, $105.7 million in capital improvement funds are being provided to Amtrak to his some of the equipment which is referred to in The Times

Wasted Energy

To the Editor:

This is written in response to the Dec. 15 letter from Wilson White Jr. I agree with Mr. White that to have street lights burning in the daytime is a waste of energy. However, it does not represent an out-of-pocket cost to the City of New York, The electricity supplied to street lights is not metered.

It is paid for under the terms of a cootract between the city and Con Edison in which the payments are computed from the wattage of the street lights and the scheduled bours of burning. When street lights are burning during nonscheduled periods, the energy used is an involuntary contribution by Con Edison. It appears in their statistics under "energy generated but not sold" along with the power consumed by netty thieves who tamper with their meters, and other minor losses.

· Coo Edison has no responsibility for, nor any access to, the cootrol devices which turn street lights on and off. Since there is no financial penalty attached to nonscheduled burning of street lights, the city's maintenance of the cootrols is of a most indifferent quality-as Mr. White has observed. in the long run, the people of New York pay for the wasted energy, of course. But they pay for it as a hidden item in their bills from Con Edison, not in their city tax bills. JAMES WILSON Staten Island, N.Y., Dec. 17, 1975

Juvenile Grand Jury

To the Editor:

There is a reasonable solution to the problem of juvenile crime. The root of the problem is the fact that the present juvenile justice system does not distinguish the Andy Hardy Offender who daserves a second chance from the ruthless cutthroat who deserves extended imprisonment. The solution is a procedure which will make this distinction fairly.

I propose creation of a "juvenile grand jury." It would have the power to make two decisions. First, is there probable cause to believe that the suspect committed a crime? Second. does the crime involve violence or breach of the peace? If the answer to both questions is yes, the suspect would be treated as an adult oo matter what his age. If the answer to the second question is no, he would be treated as a juvenile delinquent.

Like the present grand jury, the juveoile grand jury would be composed of tweoty-three adult citizens. would deliberate in secret and would act by majority vote. Unlike the present grand jury, the suspect and his counsel could be present during the presentation of evideoce, and his intercity markets, particularly in the corridors which link the bighly populated metropolitan areas of the eastern seaboard. In these areas, population density and scarcity of available land for development of new highways or airports combine to provide a favorable climate for passenger rail service.

Outside these densely-populated corridors and a few others like them, however, the beoefits of passenger rail service vary widely. To date, it is clear, the oeed for many of Amtrak's long-baul, light-density routes bas not been analyzed objectively.

The fact remains that we are expending great sums of money on a service which is used by a tiny fraction of the traveling public. Rail service in the United States accounts for only about one half of I percent of total intercity passeoger miles. Further, it is doubtful that, outside those few densely populated metropolitan corridors, rail service will ever be anything more than a highly specialized service appealing to a minority clientele.

Amtrak's service has indeed improved, and, as a member of Amtrak's board of directors, I couldn't be more pleased. That fact should not blind us, however, to the necessity for making some critical choices about the future of intercity passenger transportation in the United States.

WILLIAM T. COLEMAN JR. Secretary of Transportation Washington, Dec. 17, 1976

counsel could cross-examine witnesses.

This new procedure will cause two orincipal benefits. First, it will solve the problem of distinguishing the delinquent from the menace to society. Second, it will integrate back into the juvenile justice system the people who are victimized by these young hoodlums. If jurors can decide who will receive the death penalty, they can also decide who will be treated as a juvenile delinquent

Ripping Off 'Moms'

To the Editor:

Prof. Selwyn R, Cudjoe is a respected academiclan and sociologist who may understand those factors which contribute to many of our social ills. But, it would have been more belpful if he had devoted his time and effort to a discussion of possible remedies of these ills, Instead, he condones a con game by three "brothers" who, for all he knows, may be ripping off one mom a week (for a potential income of over $200,000 per year). His mom may have the courage to begin anew to save ber $10 monthly, but there is little hope for her to accumulate a goodly sum now.

Professor Cudjoe has, with his Dec. 10 Op-Ed article, provided justification for all of those who may now seek the advantages of a quick ripoff, at the expense of all of our moms.

Luggage in Cabs To the Editor:

Recently, during a chat about escalating costs of transportation, a sympathetic cab driver mentioned that many cabbies were bilking cusiomers by charging extra "fees for kiggage." Evidently there is no charge whatever for band luggage taken into cabs. My honest cabble said he frequently had to turn down offers for such fees from customers who had been misinformed about the rule.

Perhaps a simple sign, "No charge for hand luggage" clearly posted in each taxicab would be helpful to the legions of New Yorkers, out-of-staters. and visitors from overseas who aren't aware that their bags are free to go along with them for the ride.

Adirondack Park Agency To tha Editor:

While I appreciated your remarks "Adirondack Showdown" ed torial, I would like to point out that Adirondackers who, like me, object to the extremist movement to abolish th park ageocy, are at the same tim convinced that additional changes the park agency act are necessary its long-term success.

The park agency zoning map of th Adirondacks still embodies serious in iustices to individual landowners particularly as to farmlands in the Re source Management zone. The Ap proved Local Land Use Program concept is still burdened with exce sive, unenforceable criteria for approv abla local land use controls, and local governments in the park are undul sbackled with passive restraints eve after the park agency approves of their local land-use control programs

Perhaps the most magging source of Adirondack resentment against th park agency act is the knowledge tha other areas of the state with specia environmental value, e.g., the Catskills have been treated by the state with a kind regard for local feelings and institutions, a consideration only recently extended in a small way to th

Then there was the economics de-partment. We forgave its instructors for their incompetence; less forgivable was their active resentment toward any student who showed ability and interest in theory and history. Happily in such departments as physics and chemistry, the standards of teaching remained high.

Of course, a self-damaging dogmatism was not unknown among the students. At our table, one classmate remarks regretfully that in those days he didn't think he could learn my social science from his bourgeois professors": therefore he specialized in mathematics. Later he spent many years as a reporter and editor of The Daily Worker. We listen to the speech of the president of our College, an eminent physicist. He tells of the high number of Ph.D.'s who have emerged from the graduates. How much did the College really have to do with that? Its stu-dents were drawn from the flower of the Jewish immigration, the most concentrated aggregate of youthful intellect and zest to be found in the United States, and prepared to try to surmount a variety of impediments. There was an essential continuity between them and the 19th-century intellectual tradition.

been to college and some of them had been up North to graduate schools. They read books and newspapers and they knew the harsh facts of the double-standard life in America. They were fully aware of the specific problems and glaring inconsistencies between the words that were written in the Constitution and the day-to-day actions around them. But they believed in what the Constitution stands for and they believed in a God of ultimate justice. So they taught that it was the responsibility of all rational people to "make" both the promises of the Bible and the blueprint of the Constitutioo "work" for the good of mankind.

That small all-female faculty did not expect special treatment for black people because they were black. They did expect, and did insist on, the opportunity to compete on an equal basis, and urged their students to he prepared for this sort of challenge.

I have thought of the members of that tiny staff often in recent mooths. Their pride, bopes and convictions have a new meaning for me as I watch the parade of reformed former enemies of this country and the newly converted wrongdoers being bonored at. seminars and on television for coming around to the position that God and the Constitution may have something to offer humanity after all.

And it has occurred to me that the truly unsung heroes and heroines of this country in this Bicentennial year, and any year, are those nameless men and women who have taught, in every age, by precept and example, a simple truth: The good life projected in Holy Writ, and the liberty with equality spelled out in our Constitution, must be implemented by living, believing, menand women dedicated to the proposition that mankind is worth saving." I suppose it is honorable that we encourage the return of those prodigal sons who worked at one time to destroy most of the ideals upon which this country is based, and it is noble to forgive and forget and buy the books and support the lectures of those people who might have lost faith in both democracy and decency in their lust for power. But the real heroes and heroines of America are those ordinary men and women who oever stopped believing in this nation's potential.

That little band of teachers at Jefferson High School were active members of this special group.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26-It is a season to think not only of the troubled in our midst but of the earth's afflicted peoples. Of all those whose unhappiness cries out to the conscience of. mankind, the most desolate may be the people of Cambodia.

We have no current information on Cambodia from first-hand observation by Western diplomats or journalists, they have been excluded since the Khmer Rouge took control of the country in April 1975. But refugees, questioned by experienced correspondents, repeatedly and convincingly paint the same picture: of a crushed society living under conditions of terrifying

The reports tell of whole populations marched great distances, forced to work endiess hours in the field, cruelly punished, some clubbed to death. And all of thie happens at the orders of an unseen, unknown, Kafkaesque ieader-

Americans have particular reason to look on Cambodia and despair. For American policy and American bombs pleyed a large part in bringing Cambodia to its present pathenc state. To say'that is not to excuse the cruelties of the Khmer Rouge; nothing can do that, it is only to recognize the heavy United States responsibility in the events that led to control of Cambodia by the faceless men of terror.

The American role in Cambodia has mostly faded from our memory, if indeed it was ever understood. But it has just been re-investigated and described in a way that compels understanding. Two weeks ago the Sunday Times of London published a detailed account of United States policy in Cambodia, 1969-75, by William Shawcross. It is a remarkable piece of contemporary history - and painful reading for Americans who believe in their country's ideals.

Cambodia lived in e state nf inglorious but relatively peaceful political compromise under Sihanouk until 1969. Only e few thousand Communist insurgents fought, ineffectually, against the Government. Then Richard Nixon, began secretly bombing the eastern border areas used hy the North Vietnamese. The Vietnamese forces responded by moving deeper into Cambodia. The country's delicate internal political balance was up-

In March 1970, Sihanouk left for Moscow and Peking, to see if they would hold the Vietnamese back. While away, he was overthrown by Lon Nol. (Mr. Shewcross does not suggest any United States part in the coup.) Opposition to the Lon Nol regime moved the country quickly toward full-scale civil war.

The crucial question was whether the polarization could be stopped then -- and Cambodia saved from the suffering of Vietnam and Laos. The Chinese Prime Minister, Chou En-lai. believed a settlement was possible, bringing Sibanouk back. According to Mr. Shawcross, Chou warned that the longer a civil war went on, the harsher would be the policy of the Khmer Rouge. China even delayed hreaking relations with Phnom Penh after the Lon No! coup-until May 6, a week after the United States had effectively ended the chance of political settlement then by invading Cambodia. The United States invasion was planned by Mr. Nixon and his assistant for national security, Henry Kissinger, against the overwhelming judgment of their own experts. Mr. Kissinger told one member of his staff who objected. William Watts: "Your views represent the cowardice of the Eastern establish-

At that stage there was still a question whether the United States would become involved in Cambodian civil war. Mr. Nixon and his aides promised that it would not-that the American role would end after the North Vietnamese "sanctuaries" were cleaned nut. The promises were immediately hroken. Within a week, Mr. Kissinger's deputy, Alexander Haig, was io Phnom

Penh tn plan military liaison. Over the next three years the United States virtually took over the war against the Khmer Rouge. A United States diplomat in Phnom Penh, Thumas Enders, in knowing violation of law, secretly targeted American bombers. The heaviest bombing came in 1973, any legal authority for it. A State Department official. William Sullivan, testified that "the justification is the re-election of the President."

All together, in the Nixon-Kissinger years, American planes dropped 500,000 tons of bombs on a peasaot country without a single anti-aircraft weapon. The country was decimated. A Senate committee estimated that 500,000 Cambodians died io the war-the equivalent, in proportion to population, of 15 million American deaths.

Through those years Mr. Kissinger rejected ooe proposal efter another fur negotiation. The Khmer Rouge grew in numbers and ferocity. But theo United States policy was essentially uninterested in the fete of the Cambodians. Its purpose was to preserve American "credibility" by not being seen to "Inse."

Our culture, unlike some others, believes in individual mnral responsihility. And so ooe wooders what has happened to Americans responsible for an interventionist Cambodie policy so indifferent to Cambodian suffering. Thomas Enders, who guided the bombers in, is now the United States Ambassador to Canada. William Sollivan, who cited politics as legal authority for the bombing, is Amhassador to the Philippines. Gen. Alexander Haig is NATO commander. And Henry Kissinger is about to retire as a celebrated Secretary of State. Asked recently about his role in the Camhodian tregedy, he said: "I may have a lack of imagination, but I fail to see the

Municipal Unions and the Fiscal Crisis

By Victor Gotbaum and Edward Handman

Something went ewry in the last two years that has not been noted. For years we were told by editorial writers, politicians, and critics of every stripe and motive that New York's No. I problem was its municipal umons and their overpald, overpensiooed, o ver-benefited, underworked members lolling on the city payroll. The news media of this city set an all-time record for infatuation with a single theme, even though other old United States cities were undergoing the same social and physical deterioratioo without comparable municipal unions:

Now as the city comes limping and bleeding into the home stretch of our three-year plan, perhaps it is time to reflect on this idea that so dominated what passed as responsible thought. - The city bas just given the unions a pasting. Through layoffs and attrition, the city payroll has rid itself of 50,000 johs. City employees have lost raises, take home pay, benefits. Last summer the Simonses and Proximires thundered from Washington that unless an tional $24 million in benefits was excised from city employees, in a $12 above prime rate loan to the city. City workers today have heavier workloads, poor equipment and inadequate supplies on the fob, whether paper clips or hospital lineus. They have learned that they are the only workers who generate applause when they are laid off.

billion budget, they would hold back

the Federal Government's 1 percent

Yes sir, we've taken care of those unions. But somehow we haven't cured anything. Crime, housing, education, health care, transportation, everything has good downhill. Everyone knows that civil servaots don't work. But oow we are learning that, somehow, when you fire them hy the thousands, libraries and museums close and patients die in hospitals.

A grateful new President is scheduled to meet with our mayor and governor to hear New York's needs. The fear here is that they won't know what to ask for. The focus in New York has never left the unions long enough to eddress the root problems of our city. . .

Five hundred kilowatts of energy in New York costs $3,733; in Atlanta, $1,502; Houston, $1,757. A pound of round steak: $2.15 in New York, $1.78 in Atlanta, $1.73 in Houston.

A New Yorker earning $17,000 a year pays-37 percent more taxes than the national average. In the $50,000 bracket, he or she pays 50 percent more. A New Yorker earning $25,470 has the same real buying power as an Atlantan earning $15,825. Raveoue from sales, income and real estate taxes is sliding down.

It was heartening to see The New Ynrk Times and The Daily News embrace the Citizens Budget Commission's report that $500 million more in hudget cuts may prove disastrous. They also concurred that the Federal Government should arrange a loan stretch-out, guarantee New York notes and pay for welfare.

When these same thoughts emerged from union sources as loog as 18 months ago, editorial writers chided us for trying to pass the buck and to keep New York from 'facing its responsibilities." It should be understood that this

Federal aid, if it comes as It should, will ooly keep us at a break-eveo point as we are today: with 45 kids in a class, and our bridges, roads and water system headed the way of the West Side Highway for lack of maintenance staff and money.

Federal aid alme will not reverse the steady decline. Who in New York City has developed a program to attract business, build bousing, develop equitable distribution of Federal funds, do something to lower the ever-rising odds that kids in our blighted areas will not emerge intact into adulthood?

The true hankruptcy in New York has been in leadership, political and otherwise. Washington, Albany, City Hall, the syndrome has been the same: experts at public-relations politics, but the substance of the city and its problems eludes them.

This month marks the second anniversary of the official coming of the "fiscal crisis." Two years of lastminute, last-chance rescues must instill some confidence in our ability to survive. Jimmy Carter offers real hope that the attention and resources to ettempt the rejuvenation of ell declining citles may soon be furthcoming.

And, if now we can begin to focus oo problems beyond "the powerful municipal unions" - well, it couldn't hurt.

ESSAY

By William Safire

WASHINGTON-A speechwriter in the campaign of 1968 was asked to come up with an indignation-staring statement to appeal to the voters of Salt Lake City, and promptly drafted a blast at the smut peddlers who were illegally using the mails to send unsolicited obscene material to children.

Unfortunately, the statement was lost in the shuffle of papers aboard the cempaign plane. Just before landing, a panic-stricken Nixon aide rushed down the sisle asking "Who's got the ---- obscenity statement?"

That innocent use of an obscenity to describe a diatribe against obscenity comes to mind as local prosecutors have broken out in a rash of indictments against pornographers. In Memphis, e 33-year-old prosecutor is angling for the Governor's job by getting a dozen hard-core coovictions, iocluding the male star of "Deep. Throat." In Wichita, prosecutors are trying to drive New York-based smutineer Al Goldstein out of business by applying local Kansas standards. tion does not include the commission of, or incitement to a crime.

Yes, but. The Supreme Court has rightly been directing obscenity demoral values and standards of good cisions down to the local level, to taste. The anything-goes set is not our "community standards." But its purpose has been to allow local ereas to But certain principles are at stake in curtail local distribution, and not to stop national publication by jailing First, Government does not belong editors or actors. Neither New York the personal-morality-among-adults nor Wichita should impose its standard on the other.

The problem-in any communityis to defend the rights of those who do oot want to he exposed to pornography while defending the rights of those who do. Such a baleoce of rights is not impossible.

The solution is to allow localities to stop pornographers from grabbing all citizens, including minors, by the lapels. Curtail the hard-sell, not the hard-core. It's a free country. Let actor Harry Reems do what some people want to pay to see, let editors Al Goldstein and Larry Flynt hustle what many others feet the urge to purchase, and let all the other people who find such products repellent and degrading have the right oot to have smut thrust at

Watching the multicolor ballooc hop across the desert, Mr. Piccard says, "It is easier for a person who has judgment to learn to fly a balloon than to learn to ride a blcycle and probably safer."

As the balloon glides over the desert floor, the pilot holds the burner frame and straddles the tank like a farmboy riding a slickback pig. He uses a throttie, vent and rip cords to cootrol his There is a slight delay as the hot air travels from the burner to the top of the balloon and the craft gently rises. There are no sudden moves, oo wind rushing in the pilot's face. He is suspended from a man-made cloud that is one with the wind. Some hang balloonists favor "space walking," sending a blast of bot air under the balloop just before it touches the ground. They touch momentarily, then rise weightlessly back into the sky, hopping across the desert floor.

Mr. Higbie floated among the larger balloons until his fael supply was almost gone. As he made his final descent, a P-51 Mustang buzzed overbead. The World War II plane nosed in and out among the halloons; then, as mysteriously as it had arrived, it

New York City's economic recovery program, recently announced by Mayor Beame, will generate an investment of more than $5 billion by business and industrial concerns in the next 10 years, according to Osborn Elliott, Deputy Mayor for Economic Development He predicted an increase of 130,000 privatesuctor jobs in the next five years. [Al:1.]

A light snow fell on New York City, but in the suburbs it was much heavier, up to seven inches. It was a had day for motorists. Scores of accidents were reported in suburban communities and on highways to the city. [A1:2-3.]

More auxiliary police officers in New York City are wanted by the undermanned Police Department, which would also expand their duties, but the Patrolmen's Bevevolent Association, the police union, is against it. There are now 5,000 auxiliary officers in the city. They are unarmed and can make nnly citizen's arrests. The Police Department says the auxiliaries are "its eyes and ears." The auxiliaries "are phony cops who are acabbing on our Energy Administration and former jobs," Dennis Weaving, the P.B.A.'s chairman of the Michigan Public Serv-president, says. [D1:1.]

Christmas sales were much better than retailers had anticipated, and the rush in the final two days of the 29-day shopping season made a vital differ-ence. Sales advanced 4 percent to 10 percent over last year, with an average increase of about 6.5 percent, according to a spot check of 10 major cities. The results, however, were far below 1975's 15 percent 18 percent gains over 1974 in apparel and department stores sales, respectively. [D1:5-6.]

Questions were raised about the World Bank's lending policies in a recent and, in terms of criticism, unprecedented speech to the bank's staff members by a former director; Charies A. Cooper, who is now with the Exxon Corpora-tion in New York. Mr. Cooper, who spoke at the invitation of the staff, asked among other things whether the World Bank was making too many loans to less developed countries. [D1:6.]

Bullish is what most analysts and portfolio managers say about the stock market's prospects for 1977, and they believe that the first six months will be the better part of the year. In the next few months the Dow Jones industrial average is expected to soar above its record closing high of 1,051.70 on Jan. 11, 1973. Energy, banking, insurance and telephones are some of the stocks repeatedly cited by analysts as of-fering the money-making possibilities in 1977. [D1:3-4.]

American investors are saying that 1976 has only been a so-so year for the stock market, but foreign stock holders have done much worse, according to a survey by correspondents of The New York Times in eight cities. [D1:1-4.]

To help cut home gas-heating costs, a Federal energy official proposes that local utilities take the initiative and pay for insulation against heat loss, clock thermostats and improvements in furnace efficiency, things that would presumably be paid for by the homeowner. The cost of saving gas would be less than the cost of buying gas, according to William G. Rosenberg. sistant administrator of the Federal Energy Administration and former Car Rams Nativity Scene Residents of Bethlehem. Conn.. worked to rebuild a Nativity scene on the village green that was heavily damaged by an unindentified motorist Christmas morning. A vehicle apparently was intentionally driven through the Nativity scene at about 4:30 A.M., the state police said.

A hand was broken off the figure of the infant Jesus and an arm off one of the wise men, First Selectment Eu-gene J. Caires said. The figure of a donkey was apparently dragged two or three miles.

Mr. Caires said it was a "senseless ect" and "a very evil thing to be done to the little town of Bethlehem on Christmas morning."

Girl's Body Found

The body of a 14-year-old girl was found early Sunday in a park in Bridgeport, Conn. The police identified her as Sonia Lopez, and they said her death was suspicious. Miss Lopez was found face down in the snow in Seaside Park, and there were "some marks and abraslons" on her body, according to the police. Detective Bob Birboscak said that there were no signs of robbery but he declined to say if the girl had been sexually assaulted.

Butcher Shot in Holdup

A Brooklyn butcher was shot in the stomach in his store in the Midwood section after he refused to give his money to a holdup man, who was hit on the head with a cleaver and captured by three other butchers, who were in the rear. The butcher, Joe Chaimowitz, 55, who was shot in the store at 1203 Avenue J, was admitted to Maimonides Hospital in critical condition. The suspect, James McMahon, 20, of 1145 East Ninth Street, Brooklyn, an alleged narcotics addict, was arrested and admitted to the same hospital with head injuries.

Suffolk Sued on Housing

Suffolk County could lose $4 million in Federal community-development aid if a class-action suit by public-housing advocates, charging the county, towns and villages with failing to carry through with promised low- and moderate-income housing projects, is suc-cessful. The suit was filed in Federal Court in Manhattao and announced in Wyandanch, L.I., by Suffolk Housing Services, a group in the forefront of the effort to have public housing for lower-middle-income groups built in Suffolk. The suit charges that the county has taken money designed to ease the way for public housing and it for emphasizing projects while used it for nonhousing projects while neglecting to put up the promised public-housing uoits that the plaintiffs argue should accompany receipt of the community-development funds.

From the Police Blotter:

A customer in a Brooklyn grocery was shot in the leg by a holdup man who fired at the grocer, who had tried to hit him with a pipe. The customer, Peter Lugo, 31, of 394 Lincoln Place, was additted to Procklyn Joyrich Hor. was admitted to Brooklyn Jewish Hospital. The robber dropped the bag with $140 while fleeing from the store at 797 Washington Avenue in Prospect Heights, ... STwo safes in a Burger King restaurant at 401 Fifth Avenue at 36th Street were forced open and $3,000 stolen. The burglary was discovered by Joseph Tegaoo, the manager of the restaurant, which was closed for Christmas.

Dear Friend and Customer:

After 40 years, we're going out of business. We'll miss you -- and we wager you will miss us too.

No, we haven't been a casualty of the times. It's just that we have no successors. Our children have gone their own way, and we want to play some golf, so we will close our doors -- not as failures or losers -- but as successes -with our integrity intact -- and every bill paid.

The winners are our customers -- because we are honoring our orders placed many months ago when there was no thought of not continuing in business. We wouldn't consider hurting those fine resources who have served us so well over the years.

All that fine clothing must go -- so we've pared our overhead to the bone, and marked our stock on a "going out of business" basis.

This is a once in a lifetime chance to buy suits, sport coats, rainwear, overcoats, leathers, outerwear, trousers and furnishings ... by names such as H. Freeman & Son, Greif, Chaps by Ralph Lauren, London Fog, Gleneagles, Sero, Troy Guild, Reis of New Haven and Byford...to mention a few.

TRENTON Dec. 26-Five thunderous volleys from a lone cannon roared past the State House and echoed down West

The Fire Department said yesterday that it would begin a round-the-clock search for bodies today at the site of the linen and giftware store fire in Brooklyn that took at least four lives last Wednesday.

Modern Language Association Scholars Find Study of Bogus Words an Exercise in Wraithicography

When the Modern Language Association met here yesterday for the opening of its 91st annual convention, there was no end of words to mark the occasion—words in English, words in tongues alien, words in earnest, words in jest.

Allen Walker Read, an emeritus professor of English from Columbia University, a solidly huilt man who looks as though he would not counte-nance anything he could not see or hear, turned up to deal with shadow instead of substance. His subject was

Not "Boo!" or "I am the ghost of Christmas Past," but words that rise from the disordered imagination of writers or editors or the blunders of printers or scribes. "They have no real entity," a distinguished philologist insisted, 90 years ago, and Professor Read called them "evanescent words, commonly regarded as not heing 'parts of the language."

The best-known, he said, are "nonce words," made up by someone "who feels at bome with the formetive practices of the language." Algemon Swinhurne in 1893 referred to "Oxonolatry." worship of Oxford. Bardolatry is even more firmly established for worship of Shakespeare, to say less of Brigitte Bar-

Professor Read also distinguished the closely related "individualism," minted to fill the speaker's need. Diana Trill-ing, comparing herself with her late husband, Lionel, said that she was "a less-educated eclectic," and explained, "I don't have as many things to eclect

Designed for Immortality Then there are "hothouse words," a term planted 50 years ago to describe curious artifacsimiles in early English dictionaries. Take "dentiloquent." dictionaries. Take "dentiloquent," speaking through the teeth. "capiloouent," talking through one's nat, "doctiloquent," speaking learnedly, and "diffihulate," to unhutton. They reek of erudition. Some are coined specifically with designs on lexicographic immortality.

Professor Read described a whole am-Webster second edition of 1934. It gbostly series as "physiological words," words of plain meaning (uhhuh, yeah, hope, tsk) and words that huh, yeah, hope, tsk) and words that take the breath away (oof, cops).

When the Oxford English Dictionary was plowing through the language, last century, its editor took pains to justify omission of "abacot," usually defined—even illustrated—as "the cap of state formerly used by English kings." The word descended by a cascade of blunders from bicocket, misprinted abococket, altered to abococke and finally polished off as abacot, perhaps through abacoc.

Professor Read gave special pride of place to "dord," present in the Merri-began as a slip in an abbreviation file reading "D or d," meaning a capital D or a small d-for "density." A deletion was ordered in 1940, but the ghost kept baunting successor dictionaries, too hardy to exorcise.

Predictably ecough, elusive words, even figures of speech pursue Professor Reed even into his sleeping hours. From his dreams he has recorded such nocturnal visitors as "altertrucose," "Spica". "fibricate," "possotoficity," "spica-mento" and "thudinous."

In the paper prepared for last night's session—number 62 of a total of 666—in room 520 of the New York Hilton, he insisted that his somneologisms "have

In the very text of his talk, Professo Read inadvertestly created a new ghost of his waking hours, and it will doubt less be henceforth hallowed, baunting

It is the word "owrds," in a phrase alluding to "the richest harvest of ghost owrds, to "the richest harvest of ghost owrds, and the should reassure those who, spirits are willing but whose learning is weak. Even, an expert like Professor Read occasionally comes a cropper As he suggested, the infallible way to deaf with ghosts is to accept them and use them. They thus win a body of favor.

"I'll trade you two of these for one Doral."

One Doral is worth two of what I'm smoking now.

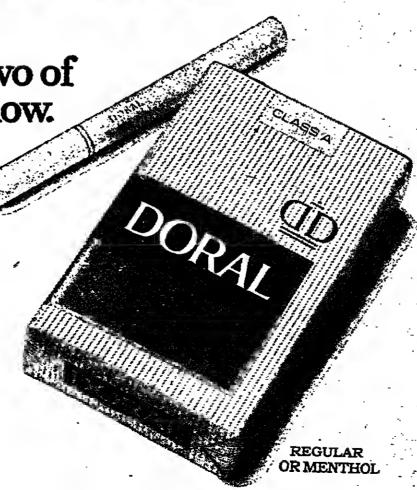

Worth it for flavor. Worth it for sheer satisfaction.

Worth it for another reason that matters to me. May matter to you. Low tar. Because Doral gives me a lot of taste. But doesn't give me a lot of tar.

Two of these for one Doral? C'mon, brother. How about it?

Of Mr. Gribetz, he says, and to bring him up to date."

Taste for Hard Work

Mr. Gribetz is a good example of how officials nurtured in the Wagner years have come back to fill positions in the city end state governments now that Mr. Beame and Mr. Carey are in charge in City Hall and Albany.

He was one of Mr. Beame's daputy mayors. A bureaucratic rather than a party politician, he was known as an effective executive with a taste for hard work. After he won election in 1974, Mr. Carey asked Mr. Gribetz to so with him to Albany. "Only if you lear it with Abe," Mr. Gribetz replied, Mr. Carey cleared it with Mr. Beame.

Straight civics now. Dr. Randolph H. Guthrie Jr. of the Hospital for Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery wants Mr. Wagner to testify at City Holl on behalf of a new burn center. The Wagner lendar is ton crowded, but they will ashion a strong statement to be read

He arrives a little early some days, a stays e little late and he takes work to Mount Kisco on weekends, Mr. Wagner said, so that he can clock some time for the law firm amid his multiple civic responsibilities.

The Wagner firm merged Jan. 1 with ne headed by Steven Kumble and on March 1 they moved into their spacious wo-floor office at 425 Park Avenue, £ 56th Street. It is polite, agreed Mr. tumble, to ask how big the firm is. thas some 70 to 75 lawyers, he said.

And he explained Mr. Wagner's role: We want his judgment on matters of importance. People pay big money for iudement."

Squads of lawyers can be turned loose in the library that sprawls row upon row on the balcony floor hut, Mr. Kumble explains, in those frequent cases where the answer to a problem cannot be looked up, Mr. Wagner's advice is invaluable.

He Has Great Judgment

Mr. Kumhie did not cite chapter-andverse. But he said that when one of the firm's major clients (it represents A&P. Itek, the Krupp interests in the United States and a number of banks) had some sort of a major problem involving "strategy," Mr. Wagner would sit in.

"Where you can't find the answer sequences. What happens if we move this way?, if we move that way?

keeps is, explains Mr. Wagner, a simplified and more pleasant verson of what he did for a dozen years in City Hall.
"I got a lotta practice." he said. "Everyfive minutes there was something new.

Besides a range of civic activities of her own. Mrs. Wagner is working simultaneously on four books. The couple turn up now and then in the social columns; Mrs. Wagner, a lively, outgoing sort, is an accomplished party-giver.

Follows Son's Career

The 66-year-old former Mayor also takes an interest in the political career of his son, Robert, the Democratic Councilman at Large for Manhattan. "He takes that 'at-large' stuff seriously," Mr. Wagner said with an affectionate grumble. 'There are times when I can't

City-government affairs in mid-after-noon. Gathered around an imposing conference table is the committee ap-pointed by Mayor Beame to try to figure out how, with the municipal government strapped for money for essential services, something might be arranged to save the municipal broadcasting station, WNYC. Mr. Wagner settles in a side chair.

When their pre-election polls and po-litical perceptions began to tell New York Democrats that the Carter-for-President campaign was in trouble, Governor Carey sat down over breakfast one morning with Mr. Wagner and

On the way to the airport, when be has been staying in New York, the Governor often will tell his driver, according to aides, "stop by the house and let's see if Bob's home."

On this morning—and at several such sessions afterwards—they put together plans for a Citizens for Carter committee, to give a boost to the New York campaign. "Good God, what a committee—it had everybody," said one Carey staff member, "Franklin D. Roosevelt Democrats and Al Smith Democrats and everybody you could think of."

Besides that, the Wagners, be as the arranger, she as the persuader of wellto-do society types to part with $500 a ticket, put on a successful fund-raising dinner to help the state campaign.

It is with advice on strategy that, obviously, must be kept confidential, and with such practical help that Mr.
Wagner translates the lessons of his own political life into help for the Governor he belped to elect.

The factual details of his long political career are hinted at in the plaques and pictures that Mrs. Gillan has picked for the wall behind his office

And now, the same freckled, dumpy, impassive, ever-polite sort who lived through the intermittent vilification that is any Mayor's lot, he practices law and politics and civic service successfully, lucratively, placidly.

Mrs. Gillan brings in o sheaf of papers and he begins writing on them.
"Tm receiver for the Hotel Taft," he explains. "Got to sign their payroll."
Stephen Berger is shown in. He looks wary to see someone there besides Mr-Wagner. Mr. Berger is executive director of the Emergency Financial Control Board, which monitors city finances, and he customarily looks wary. He is there, as Mr. Wagner explains it, only because they both were members of a panel that solved the nursing-home strike and they had agreed to provide continuing surveillance of the solution they worked out.

Perhaps it is the legacy of his years of dealing with the famous and powerful, perhaps just his own old-shoe sort of personality, but Mr. Wagner moves through it all unassumingly.

Order Out of Disorder

If you're thinking of turning over a new leaf to go with the new year, Stephanie Winston, who runs a business called The Organizing Principle, is oow offering a course on the subject. It consists of four weekly sessions, for a total of six hours, and covers such things as why you got disorganized in the first place, handling paperwork and files, and effective use of space and storage areas. The course is $85, the next one will start after the new year. Miss Winston can be reached at 230 East 15th Street. Her telephone number is 533-8860.

Playing the Palm Beach Game

Take five men and women of impeccable social backgrounds and a knowledge of the inner workings of Palm Beach. Mix in a sense of humor and a dash of irreverence, and lo and behold, there's a new board game called, not too surprisingly, Palm Beach. The game, which was formulated after the quintet "noticed the antics to which people would lower themselves in order to social climb" is a spoof, but as with all spoofs, it's laced with truth. The game revolves around six resort types who descend on Palm Beach, loaded with money, and try to make themselves socially acceptable. Once the players decide on which character they are, they're given a little folder with all their background and off they go. They may land on good squares or bad. There is, for example, a "spite" square where someone reports you to the Internal Revenue Service. Palm Beach can be played by two to six persons and it's more luck and fun than strategy and intelligence. It will be available after Jan. 15, at $25, at Cache-Cache, 758 Madison Avenue (67th Street); Mill Pond House and the Country Lady in Oyster Bay, L.I., and the Outdoor Trader in Greenwich,

The Last-Minute Announcement

Just supposing right this moment you decide to have a New Year's party and you want to be formal about itor your daughter comes home and says she was married last week and you're so thrilled, you want everyone to know, fast. All this is leading up to a tiny printing shop that will zip out such thlogs as annouocements and invitations with raised lettering in 48 hours. Business cards and letterheads can be done in half that time. Be prepared to pay a premium for the rushed work, and don't expect engraving in that time. Go to Jules Press at 55 West 42d Street and ask for Peter Cohen. If you can't find the place, look downstairs in the Sixth Avenue

If we just stopped to think about it, we'd probably all agree that clocks are kind of a bore. There are thousands of shapes and designsbut almost all of them confroot us with numbers from I to 12. A young man named Bruce Kay has found a timepiece that is somewhat more persocal. The face is a mass of letters and it depends on you as to what the letters say. It can be your name, repeated over and over, or a message or a poem or just about anything. The clock, battery operated, has light gray letters on a white face. Personalization takes three weeks. The price is $55 and $3 postage and the place to write is Bruce Kay, 61 Jane Street, New York 10014. The telephooe number is 242-3394.

Changes in a Familiar Item

Don't listeo to anyone who tells you that baskets have had it. They haven't-they're just getting more sophisticated. Among the best looking of that genre, and certainly the newest, are the designs by Alessandro dotting the home accessories floor at Bonwit Teller. A wellknown furniture designer, Alessandro has taken everything from small baskets to hamper types, painted them with designs and then lacquered them with a patented process that he says won't chip. The prices go from $14 to $185 and if the latter figure sounds horrifying, think of them as objets d'art. Alessandro Designs Inc. is at 315 East 91st Street. The telephone is 535-7790.

A Resolution To Be Myself

By JEAN KERR

HAVE THIS jumpy feeling that New Year's resolutions are best made in the necessary privacy of The Morning After. Or that could be the entire day after, depending on the duration and quality of the preceding night's revelries.

Your average revel is frequently attended by more than 16 people, which is too many; and you don't even get to talk to Old Charlie, which is why you went in the first place. Then the liquor flows like wine and, since dinner may oot be served until II o'clock, most people are oot even aware that the wine is now flowing like water, which is absolutely unavailable.

This is why, on New Year's Day, you oeed privacy and sympathy and tea and something that will put more pain reliever into the bloodstream in seconds. If you're going to turn over a new leaf, you want to be quiet, and all alone away from the telephooe. To get privacy all you need to do is pick up an object, any object, a box, a shoe (anything but the baby or your mother) and announce. "I'm taking this to the attic."

Nobody will think this in any way odd, since it's clear that at least half of that junk that's been on the floor since Christmas will have to go somewhere before Monday.

Once in the attic, surrounded by silent trunks and old playpens with missing slats, you can think. You can ask questions. Why were you born? Why did you ever agree to go to a party in New Jersey when Bill gets lost even driving to Connecticut? Is there enough leftover turkey to serve seven people if you cream it and add tuna fish? What on earth would Craig Claiborne say about that? And one more thing: Why do your children always begin a conversation just as you start dialing the telephone? By now you should be in the proper state of mind to mend your ways and make your list.

Having been so generous with my excellent advice, I must now confess that I began my own resolutions not in the attic hut, quite prematurely, in the basement of a department store. It was last week, and the days had definitely dwindled down to a precious few, when I Continued on Page C14

Jean Kerr is the author of many plays, books, articles and year-end resolutions.

F YOU felt a moment of unease, foreboding or worse when you looked at this page, the source of those malign vibrations was prob-ably the drawing on the right.

It is the work of Edward Gorey, the master miniaturist of the muted, veiled, and unspeakably sinister, and it was lospired by the sets and costumes be is designing for the revival of "Dracula."

The play is an adaptation of Bram Stoker's novel about the widely misunderstood Transylvanian nobleman by Joho Balderstone and Hamilton Deane, two names that resonate with lurking evil of their own when you come to think of it.

"I first read it when I was 7," Mr. Gorey said the other day, speaking of the novel. 'It scared the hell out of me, I must sey. It wasn't the most borrifying book of my childhood, though. That was something called 'Child Stories From Dickens.' Mr. Nothing but deathbed scenes.

Mr. Gorey was at the Gotham Book Mart Gallery on West 47th Street, where a selection of bis drawings and etchings are on display. He bad come from his apartment in Murray Hill carrying a dogeared copy of "Dombey and Son." Dickens, he said, could always de depended upon to stimulate the febrile fantasy that shummers in his work.

"And the movies," he said "I love watching trashy movies. Just last night I saw 'Ilsa, Harem Keeper of the Oil Sheiks,' or somsthing like that on Broad-

Mr. Gorey, who is in his forties, looks disheveled rather than sinister like the Dracula depicted in his drawing. He has spreading Gladstonian whiskers and lopes around town in sneakers, condescript trousers, a frayed sweater and a molting furry coat.

Having noted that a nostalgia huff recently paid $1,800 for a complete set of 1927 New York Yankees baseball cards and $600 for an old Mutt and Jeff comic book, end that the going price for a copy of a 1926 Black Mask Magazine is $350, Arnold M. Auerhach, writer of countless radio and television shows, penned this lament:

"We were on the E' train, heading for Chambers Street one evening last week at the rush hour," writes William Cole, the anthologist and Saturday

"Below Union Square, progress became jerky. We'd stop, sit a while, start, groan to a stop, Eventually there was an announcement on the loudspeaker. This is the engineer. Sorry for the delay, ladies and gentlemen, but there's a dog ahead of us on the tracks, and we can't go any faster than he goes.'

"Fifteen minutes later, at Chambers," Mr. Cole continues, "I saw the dog, an understandably dirty collie with a haunted expression, run to an adjacent track, scoot up the stairs to the end of the platform," elude a Transit Authority patrolman, duck under the turnstile and bead out loto the city streets."

In a similar... ahem ... vein, it was noted a couple of weeks ago that Brian Aherne, long retired from acting, lived so quietly that many people assumed that be was dead.

Mr. Aherne, bappily married and in comfortable circumstances, wrote in to express his amusement

"It reminded me," he went on, "of the lady who peered at me in an elevator at the St. Regis Hotel. Excuse me, she said, 'but weren't you Brian grocery stores of 50 years ago is that everything was "loose," which is to say unpackaged—butter, coffee, sugar, flour, rice, beans, split peas, macaroni,

Even milk was sold loose, something that would borrify bygiene-conscious shoppers today. Bottled milk was available, but it was more expensive, and you had to leave a deposit of 2 or 3 cents for the bottle.

Loose milk was more common, especially for thrifty families. Every family had e milk pail of maybe two quarts capacity with a tight-fitting cover and a stiff wire handle.

The grocer stored his loose milk in a couple of containers of about, 25 gallons' capacity. They were dropped into an ice chest (real ice, not mechan-ical refrigeration), and hanging on a hook outside the case were two alumi-num dippers with long handles. One was a one-quart dipper, the other was a one plat dipper.

The grocer dipped the utensil into the big-milk cao, lifted it up out of the case and deftly upended the dipperful of milk into your milk cootainer with-out spilling a drop. A quart of milk cost about a dime, possibly less.

Because bome ice-boxes were so inadequate then, you did not buy loose milk in large quantities. If you needed more later in the day, you went back to Louie's.

Butter was kept in open wooden tubs, arranged horizontally in an up-right ice box that bad glass doors. One tub was salt and the other was sweet. The grocer scooped out the butter with a wooden paddle. With experience he could come out with a lump pretty close to one pound (or whatever quantity you wanted). He dropped the butter onto a slip of waxed paper and then the butter and paper out the scale. The more elegant processes cold scale. The more elegant groceries sold you the butter in a cardboard scoop or one that was made of very thin wood, like a veneer.

Very little oleomargarine was sold in those days. For one thing, it had a disagreeable taste. And, because of the clout that the dairy iodustry had in Albany, oleomargarine could be sold only in white form. The manufacturer included a coloring capsule with the oleo (which is what we called it then), and you had to mix in the color yourself. That was hard and tedious work.

POOR OLD MR. BROWN RICE

All the "loose" groceries were dis-played in cloth sacks with their rims rolled down, or in wooden boxes. Never mind sanitation, flies, dust and all that nonsense.

Nearly all home laundry was done on the washboard, and the leading laundry soaps were Octagon, Kirkman's, P&G and Fels.

Cheese came in five-pound blocks, packed lo a wooden box about one foot long, four inches bigh and four inches wide. The grocer sliced your order by hand (and his hands were not always clean). I don't know why we called it store cheese; certainly no families made their our at here. made their own at home,

60-Minute Gourmet

By Pierre Francy

HERE are oumerous foods that by their very nature, demand hasty cooking. A case in polot is call's liver—if, thet is, you prefer thin cuts of liver, as I do. Properly done, the liver should cook no more than two to three mioutes to a side. If the liver is overcooked, it becomes, to my taste, dry and therefore un-palatable.

Thus liver falls into that category of meals where the time-consuming elements are the dishes destined to accompany it.

The ideal accompaniment for calf's liver is a purée of potatoes and such other vegetables as complement it in flavor, color and texture.

A sauté of zucchini and tomatoes provençale is highly compatible with sautéed liver. The dish is called provencale in its use of oil, garlic and the tomatoes. It takes about seven minutes to cook, ooce the ingredients are ready for the skillet.

To seve time io preparing the menu here, put the potatoes up to boil first (the cooking, including the final preparation, is approximately half an hour). As the potatoes cook, prepare and cook the zucchini dish. Finally and cook the zucchin man. Finance, sauté the liver quickly.

The liver, by the way, takes a thin, delicate pan sauce, made by addition of a little vinegar and a touch of butter to the skillet the moment the liver is cooked and removed.

Serve with the usual salad and cheese and a light, purchased dessert, such as a fruit sherbet.

Foie de Veau au Vinaigre (Calf's liver with vioegar)

4 slices calf's liver, about one pound Salt and fresbly ground pepper to Flour for dredging

2 tablespoons oil
3 tablespoons plus 2 teaspoons butter
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley.
1. Spriokle the liver with salt and pepper. Dredge it on both sides in flour to coat thoroughly. Shake off excess 2. Heat the oil end two tablespoons of butter in e large, heavy skillet, and when the mixture is very hot and starting to brown, add the liver slices. Cook about one minute over high heat or until nicely browned. Turn the liver and cook about one minute-or longer, If desired.

3. Remove the liver end pour off the fat from the skillet. Add the remaining butter and cook over high heat, stirring until it is hazelnut brown, Quickly add the wine vinegar and let it boil up. Pour this mixture over the liver. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve. Yield: Four servings.

Purco de Pommes (Pureed potatoes)

1½ pounds potatoes Salt to taste tablespoons butter et room temperature 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg or to taste. Peel the potatoes and quarter or cut them into two-inch cubes.

2. Place the potatoes io a saucepan. and add cold water to cover and salt to taste. Bring to a boil and simmer 20 minutes or until potatoes are tender.

3. Drain the potatoes and put them through a foco mill or potato ricer. Return them to the saucepan.

4. Meanwhile bring the milk to a boil.

5. While the milk is being heated, use a wooden spoon and add the butter to the potatoes while beating. Add salt and nutmeg to taste and beat in the Yield: Four servings.

Zucchini and Cherry Tomatoes Provencale

2 firm, umblemished zuechini, about three-quarters pound total weight 3 tablespoons olive oil Salt and freshly ground pepper to

2 large cloves garlic, unpeeled 16 cherry tomatoes.

1. Trim the ends from the zucchini. Quarter the zucchini lengthwise. Cut each quarter into half-inch lengths. There should be about three and onehalf cups.

2. Heat the oil, and wheo it is hot, add the zucchini. Sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste. Add the garlic and cook, shaking the skillet and stir-ring until zucchini starts to brown, ebout five minutes.

3. Add the tomatoes and cootinue to cook, stirring gently so the tomatoes cook evenly without breaks in the skin. Cook about two minutes, just until the tomatoes are heated. Do'not overcook, or the tomatoes will break. Remove and discard the garlic and serve hot. Yield: Four servings.

The Poet's Black Cake

One year it was quiche. Another year everyone was making Bundt cakes. And then there were

Is there a food in your future for 1977? Is there a sure-fire answer to: What's cooking in 1977? Well, the winter book favorite seems to be a little item calling for—among other ingredients—19 eggs and five pounds of raisins, It's Emily Dickinson's Black Cake. That's right—the same Emily Dickinson known until recently for her poetry. In a few days, however, a lot of people may think of her as the 19th century's answer to Julia Child.

That's because, on Dec. 29, Jan. I and Jan. 2, IBM will sponsor three public television showings of a 90-minute version of "The Belle of Amherst," starring Julie Harris.

As anyone who has seeo any of the 275 performances of this play knows, it opens with the actress stepping center stage, holding a Victorian cake platter whose cynosure is a dark, rich-looking confection

"The recipe? Of course. I'll go slowly. Now it's Black Cake."

Charles Francis, an executive at IBM, estimates that by the time the television showings of "The Belle of Amherst" are concluded, Emily Dickinson's Black Cake will be as famous as the Crepes Suzette created for the then Prince of Wales in 1898 by the late Henri Charpeotier on the terrace of the Café

"After all," Mr. Francis said, "Miss Harris will give the recipe to millions of viewers on public television. Charpentier moved in a small circle to that."

"Before the touring production of "The Belle of Amherst" closed Dec. 19 at the Huntington Hartford Theater in Los Angles, Miss Harris said she was planning to send out Black Cake as a holiday gift. The actress said she planned to retire to the kitchen of her small Sherman Oaks home to cook up a storm for her closest friends. Other samples, packed in English tin boxes, will reflect the work of a Los Angeles pastry coef who had mastered the confection to the standards of Miss Harris, who has made the cake herself many times.

During the run of the play at the Amherst College theater—in the shadows of the Dickinson home, which is now college property—the pastry cook at a local int tried the recipe, which came from the Emily Dickinson archives at Harvard.

At first, the results disappointed Charles Nelson Reilly, who directed "The Belle of Amherst," and William Luce, the playwright, who included the recipe in the 110-minute play. But on second thought and final bite, both feit the cook had succeeded rather well.

That recipe? In the play, it goes like this: 2 pounds of flour; 2 pounds of butter; 2 pounds of sugar; 19 eggs; 5 pounds of raisins; 1½ pounds of citron; 1½ pounds of currants; ½ pint brandy (Miss Dickinson said she never used father's best); 1½ pints molasses; 2 nutmegs, grated; S teaspoons of cloves; mace; lemon; 2 teaspoons of soda; 2 good pinches of cells.

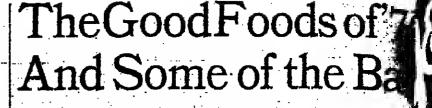

"Beat butter and sugar together. Then you add the 19 eggs, one at a time. Without beating—this is very important. Then you beat the mixture again, and add the brandy alternately with the flour, soda, salt and spices that you sifted together. Then the molasses. Then take the S pounds of raisins, and your 3 pounds of currents and citron and sprinkle

"Bake about three hours and if you use cake pans or if you use a milk pan, as I do, you'd better leave it in the oven six or seven hours.

Everybody loves it; hope you will too. "Thank you for asking me Sometimes I bake it for a neighbor and enclose a short poem which is usually so obscure that oobody can understand it. My poems are becoming collectors items, in the village. People compare them to see who has the strangest one."

As for Miss Harris, she says that if, by some mira-cle, she were ever to encounter the New England poet who so enchants her, "I'd ask her to show me how she made her rye and Indian bread."

By MIMI SHERATON

Year's end is the time to look back over the year and evaluate it. Having eaten my way from 76 to 77, I find it was a year of memorable foods, good

In compiling the following list, it was encouraging to note that there were plenty of good things to choose from. This array of the unforgettable—the good and the bad—covers only food roadwate not foods products, not foods prepared in restaurants. That's another story.

So is next year, apparently, with its promises of cottonburgers being de-veloped by the Southern Regional Research Center in New Orleans, and foods treated with drugs to make fats and carbohydrates in frances able, a process being worked at University of California at Angeles School of Medicine.

And with Jimmy Carter in the House, 1977 may well be the year the already perfected preformed butter slice works its way into production and marketing

It seems that dishing up and spraing plain old-fashioned peanut but is a problem in a fast-food situation Solidifed into a loaf and sliced, m like American cheese, the peanut but slice can simply be slapped between pieces of bread.

The Good . . .

Hot steamed corn-on-the-cob, dripping with melted butter and livened with sprinklings of fresh lime juice, salt and stinging bot chili powder, pur-chased from a street vendor in the Mexican section of Chicago, stands out as the single most unforgettable taste sensation of the year.

The prosciutto, now made in Peno-sylvania by Citterio, the 98-year-old Italian company famous for cured hams and sausages, turned out to be the best domestic prosciutto I've ever tasted. The lean, rose-colored air- and peppercured meat was firm textured and silky with a flavor at once sweet, salty, earthy and almost antique, Many food earthy and almost antique. Many-food shops around the city have it, among them Manganaro's, 483 Nioth Avenue, oear 37th Street ($6.50 a pound); Todaro Brothers, 555 Second Aveoue, near 30th Street ($6.40 a pound), and Balducci's, 424 Avenue of the Americas, near Ninth Street ($5.99 a pound).

Absolutely fresh, uncanned duck liver, flavored only with salt and inlaid with flery flecks of green peppercorns, offered a taste hard to beat for outend-out luxury. Prepared by Rougie in the French Perigord region, this lushly pink and satiny pate had a richer, more subtly sophisticated flavor than even the best goose liver. William Poll, 1051 Lexington Avenue, oear 74th Street; Macy's and Bloomingda!e's all have it on and off for between $70 and $75 a pound.

At La Grenouille it is called saucisson a l'ail. Italians know it as soprassata. To Americans it is generally coosidered litalian salami. But by any name, the version turned out by Savoy Provisions, 102 West Houston Street, is the most extraordinary I've come across.

The longer it hangs, the harder this salami becomes. As it dries it takes on a richer, more intense flavor, while becoming easier to slice. It should be coming easier to sice, it should be sliced translacently paper-thin as at La Grenouille, and served as hors d'oeuvre along with curis of sweet better and crusty Prench or Italian bread. It can be purchased directly from Savoy in $3, but they will not slice it Molinari Brothers, 9th Avenue, near 53d Street, will sell it sliced at $3.29 a pound.

The cheese of the year was gaperon, a specialty of the French Auvergne. It looks like a moldly little igloo but it is ripe and heady, with scents of black peppercorns and garlic, Again a find that's hard to come by gaperoo has been at Ideal Cheese Shop, 1205 Sec-ood Avenue, near 63d Street, Macy's Word of Mouth, 147 East 72d Street. and E.A.T., 1063 Madison Avenue. All expect to have more soon.

Gravad herring in dill-mustard sauce is perhaps the most outstanding spe-cialty at the Red Herring, 384 Bleecker Street in Greenwich Village. Fillets of fresh, raw herring cured in a vinegar brine, are blanketed with a sauce of sharp and sweet mustard, dill and an edge of Swedish vinegar. Try it with Danish rye bread and a shot of well-iced aquavit. The herring is $8 a pound and available only when the fresh fish are in the market.

Fresh fettucine of rare toothsomeness is homemade daily at Pasta & Cheese, 1375 Third Avenue, near 79th Street, for $1.50 a pound. Green or with 1075 wide or narrow widths, fresh of it is an exceptional reodition of may well he the world's single irresistible food staple.

Tarragon mustard made in Ent by Crabtree & Evelyn, is intere-and exotic enough to be a relish, H of black Madagascar pepper, M can chilies, all mellowed by the coous overlay of tarragon, make a sharp and distinguishing accept cold-roast lamb or pork, in a vinal dressing ar a game sauce. At M Glass, 52 East 58th Street, for a 12-ounce jar.

One hardly has to have a swe to appreciate the sophisticated of the new sandwich cookies by Saralee Singer for her shop, Place, 144 East 74th Street, Two of a sort of hazelnut torte enclose a middle layer of fu bittersweet chocolate, making trim oblong cookies perfect a touches with cups of espresso. A cookies costs $4.75.

. . . And the Bad

Tube-A-Goo may well be the worst food creation of the century, let alone the year. Developed by the Amurol Products Company of Naperville, Ill., this so-called treat for children consists of see-through squeeze-and-eat plastic tubes filled with red (cherry,) purple (grane), or trompoise (raspheryal syr-(grape), or turquoise (raspberry!), syrups that look and smell exactly like hair waving lotion.

A close second for general miserableness is Moon Dust, tiny flecks of dried apples hyped tip with artificial colors and flavors to simulate various fruits, each for a different day of the week. The pastel crumbs, loaded with sugar, are distributed by United Commodities International ("A Life Resources Company"), in Colton, Calif., and are interested as a cereal topping for children. They look, smell and taste like crumbs or bubble gum.

This was the year of the high fiber breads such as Less and Fresh Horizons, breads made partly of indigestible plant callulose substances that add bulk to the diet without adding calories or cholesterol. The efficacy of an abunor cholesterol. The efficacy of an anim-dance of fibers in the diet is already being questioned. What is beyond doubt is that they add to flawly of the breads a bland nothingness. As for texture, try pressing a slice of one of these-breads and notice that it never springs back into shape, Rolf it up in a ball between thumbers of forefinger and more between thumb and forefinger and you have an instant spitiball. Wad it up in big moist clumps and you can clean wallpaper with it. It's the bread of 101 uses, none of them eating.

It's hard to say which of the turkey-deliments is the worst. Tasteless turkey has been chemicalized with artificial colors and flavors to simulate ham, bologna, salami and pastrami. What it simulates most of all is damp and alightly salty manila cardboard.

It was at a Weight Watcher's lunch-con that I sampled another of the

Coulibiac: The World's Greatest Dish

those, of course, who will disagree but 1 submit that the dish, the world's greatest(is purely and simply that excelling and sublime creation known in French as couliblac de saumon and sometimes as kiulibiak de saumon (pronounced

It is not easy to explain blithely to the uninitiated precisely what coulibiac de saumon is. The easiest way out would be to define it as it frequently is in dictionaries of gastronomy, as a "pate of salmon." But such a definition is, truly woefully inadequate.

It is no mere trifle, no ordinary pâté, something to be dabbled with while awaiting a second course or a third or a fourth. A conlibiac is a celestial creation, manna for the culinary gods and a main course unto itself. I'm not at all convinced that anything should precede such a sublime invention, except perhaps a spoonful or two of caviar. And 1 am less convinced that anything should follow it. Who can improve on paradisiacal bliss?

A coulibiac admittedly demands patience, time, talent and euthusiasm, and if you are possessed of these, what a magnificant offering to those invited to your table. Fie on goose, fie on turkey, fie on game and all the rest. Blessed be the holiday table graced with coulibiac. And blessed he any cook who can master it—and almost any cook can. If you are skilled enough to prepare a brioche dough, a standard French crepe and make a cream sauce, you are

One of the bonuses of a coulibiac: Almost all the components can be made the day or night before. The brioche and crepe are the externals, the outer trappings of the dish. The filling is a well-seasoned but easily made compendium of textures and flavors that include fresh samon, hard-cooked eggs, rice, dill, mushrooms and shallots. Classically, it includes the chopped, cooked vesiga, the spinal marrow of sturgeon, but this is by no means essential. If you do want it however, it is, if you can believe it, included available in New York.

The Assembly and Baking of a Coulibiac of Salmon

Brioche dough (see recipe) Salmon and mushrooms with veloute (see recipe) 14 seven-inch crêpes (see recipe) ... Bice and Cg filling tablespoons cold water tablespoons butter at room temperature 1/2 pound plus 4 tablespoons hot melted butter

Salmon and Mushrooms With Veloute

The salmon and mushrooms:

2 skinless, honeless salmon fillets, preferably cen-ter-cut, each weighing about one and one-half

2 tablespoons butter

2 tablespoons finely chopped onion

2 tablespoors finely chopped shallots
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
4 pound fresh mushrooms, thinly silced
4 cup finely chopped fresh dill
2 cups dry white wine
The veloute:

tablespoons butter

Brioche Dough

cup milk teaspoon sugar tablespoons (packages) dry yeast to 41/2 cups flour Salt to taste

1 cm egg yolks (about 12)
8 tablespoons (one stick) butter at room temperature.
1. Pour the milk into a saucepan and heat it gradually to lukewarm. Remove from the heat. If the milk has become too hot, let it cool to lukewarm.

2. Sprinkle the milk with sugar and yeast and stir to dissolve. Cover with a towel. Let stand about five minutes and place the mixing in a warm place (the natural warmth of a turned-off oven is good for this) about five minutes. It should ferment during the period and increase in volume.

3. Place four cups of flour with salt to taste in the bowl of an electric mixer fitted with a dough hook, or use a mixing bowl and wooden spoon. Make a well in the center and pour in the yeast mixture, the cup of yolks and butter. With the dough hook or wooden spoon gradually work in flour until well blended. Then heat vigorously until dough is quite smooth and can be shaped into a ball.

4. Turn the dough out onto a lightly floured board and knead until it is smooth and satiny, about 10 to 15 minutes. As you work the dough, continue to add flour to the kneading surface as necessary to prevent sticking but take care not to add an excess or the finished product will be tough.

5. Lightly butter a clean mixing bowl and add the ball of dough. Cover with clean towel and let stand in warm place about one hour or until double in bulk. Punch the dough down. Turn it out once more onto a lightly floured board. Knead it about one minute and return it to the clean bowl. Cover closely with plastic wrap and refriger-

6. The next morning punch the dough down again and continue to refrigerate, covered, until ready to use.

Using a sharp carving knife, cut each fillet, one at a time, on the bias into slices about one-third inch thick. Each fillet should produce about 12 slices. The Eggless Egg Cream TO THE LIVING SECTION:

There is egg cream on your face if you fall for those explanations of the egg cream. There was no egg! Not in the drink, not mixed in with the chocolate preblended with the milk. No, the egg cream story bas been a hoax. And how do I know? Well listen

As I was looking for a hard-to-find syrup in my father's candy store on Eighth Avenue and 38th Street some 30 years ago (he owned the store for about 25 years then), I discovered by accident an old, dusty, cobwebbed sign that read "A Cream—8 cents." That's right the words "a cream," not "egg cream" or "ugh" cream or whatever just "a cream." cream" or "ugh" cream or whatever, just "a cream," which really made sense.

For one, cream was used more often than milk, and, secondly, the words "a cream" meant you wanted cream with the chocolate syrup. (When I was working there I even made vanilla, coffee and cherry

So for those who want to believe "egg" was in egg creams, go ahead. For the rest of us, we will just be content to be egged on a little and smile when we return the drink to its original beginnings and order just "a cream."

When one buys vonilla beans. Q when one purs volume how often con they be used? How often con they be used? How should they be stored after use? Or should one only use them o single time and then discard them?

A Vanilla beans are an expensive flavoring agent, available in many fine shops that specialize in food delicacies. One vanilla bean can be reused honorably a number of times, as often, in fact, as it still maintains a reasonable aroma and continues to impart flavor. Some recipes call for splitting vanilla beans before adding them to milk and so on before cooking. When split, the tiny, dark center beans are released into the liquid and those contein flavor also.

After a vanilla bean has been usedto prepare ice cream or a custard, for example—the beans should be washed well in cold water. It is then best stored in a container of sugar, which serves a double purpose: It prevents the bean from drying out and also flavors the sugar. The flavored sugar, may then be used for any desserts that benefit from a vapilla flavor.

Q. Would you please print o recipe for one of my favorite dishes, ossobuco, the Italian dish made with yeal shanks?

A. This is the best ossobuco formula we've ever hed access to:

Ossobuco Milanese 3 veal shanks, each sawed into three pieces two inches thick

½ cup flour
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper tablespoons olive oil tablespoons butter teaspoon ground sage teaspoon rosemary medium-size onion, finely chopped 3 cloves garlic small carrots, diced

1 rib celery, diced 11/4 cups dry white wine 11/4 cups chicken stock 2 tablespoons tomato paste

1 tablespoon grated lemon peel.

 Dredge the meat in the flour, which has been seasoned with one tea-spoon of the salt and the pepper. 2. Heat the oil and butter together in a large skillet. Using medium heat, cook the meat on all sides until golden brown. If necessary, add a little more oil or butter.

3. Arrange the meat in a Dutch 3. Arrange the meat in a Dutch oven, standing each piece on its side so the marrow found in the bone does not fall out as the meat cooks. Sprinkle the veal with the sage and rosemary. Add the ooion, one clove garlic, minced, the carrots and celery. Spriokle the vegetables with the remaining teaspoon of salt. Cover the Dutch oven closely and braise 10 minutes.

4. Remove the cover and add the wice, chicken stock and tomato paste.

Cover and simmer the dish a the stove for two hours.

5. Mince the remaining two of garlic and combine with the and lemon peel. Sprinkle the min called gremolata, over the wear serve immediately.

Macaroni and other pasta were usually displayed in open wooden boxes, and shops in Italian neighborhoods stored loose pasta in specially designed drawers that had display windows.

In poorer neighborhoods it was customary to buy by price—"Gimme a dime's worth of sugar" or "a nickel's worth of rice." As thought a quarter-pound of something was not small enough, customers often asked for "half a quarter" of cheese or some, thing. Most stores gave credit.

that was still treasured by a child and that it would be missed sorely as soon as its absence was noted. So far, in the few weeks the store has been open, nobody has reclaimed a toy.

Besides being a place to dump unwanted toys, it's nice to think that the store is a way of keeping in use a lot of toys and games that ought to be kept in circulation. All those marvelous jigsaw puzzles, for instance, that are so quickly outgrown. Now old puzzles won't die, they'll just move away.

Skateboard Safety

On the subject of gifts that give one pause, consider the skateboard. It's certainly one of the most enjoyable activities to come along for younsters in a long time. But even a modicum of common sense tells you it's got to be dangerous fun, especially in the Skateboards were selling furlously in the pre-Christmas rush. In a spurt of post-Christmas wisdon you might like to buy the youngster a skateboard helmet to go with it. It turns out that the helmets—used by hockey players, too—are actually fashionable in addition to being protective. They make one look like a professional skateboarder, if there is such a thing.

The helmets—a white plastic shell with foam lining—are made in children's sizes by C.C.M. Pro-Gard and sell for $5 at a number of bike stores around the city, including Metro Bicycles, West Side Bicycles and 14th Street Bicycles.

And Now for a Laugh

Of course, you may have had the merriest Christmas ever. But if, on the other hand, you feel that one thing missing from the celebration was some-thing that you and your children could laugh at, something really funny, it's not too late to find the remedy.

An absclutely fail-safe way of making people laugh, at least in our experience, is a marionette called The Bird. It's a simple contraption: four pieces of unfinished wood representing the feet, body and head, jcioed together by three pieces of rope. When you manipulate the animal—and it is easy to do—the feet stride clumsily forward, the head bobs and weaves, and the little hird actually walks along with you, impervious to the growing laughter around it.

A problem is that, as with any mariocette, the strings are constantly on the verge of tangling. The bird costs $8.50 at Performer's Outlet, 222 East 85th

On Peasant Revolution Talk

Nights Still Thrive T By BERNADINE MORRIS Last year, it was the tunic over pants. Or a slithery cling of jersey. Or a graceful drape of chiffon, But 1977 will be welcomed in a different way. The wheel of fashion has turned. It isn't the woman in something quiet and inconspicuous who will garner the attention. It's the one in silk that swishes, in the dress awash with ruffles or ballooning sleeves, in colors that are luminous. It started in Paris last summer when Yves Saint Laurent presented bis rich peasant collection. The sumptuousness of the clothes shattered for a time the reign of understated elegance.
Twelve days after the Saint Laurent ahow we promoted Oscar de la Renta's big taffeta skirt with the velvet top. We sold eight the first day and it cost $500," said Kal Ruttenstein, the president of Bonwit Teller. "It's never stopped selling," he went on. "It's changed women's way of dressing in the evening." By fall, the woman in the big taffeta skirt began stealing the show at parties.
"In a room full of people, the woman

time attracting attention," Bill Blass observed. "It's hard to get away with a simple chiffon or jersey dress these days. The dress has to look important."

The triumph of the big taffet dress occurred at the opening of the Russian costume exhibit at the Metropolitan Museum of Art early this month when the real Saint Laurents worn by such women as Marella Agnelli and Jacque line de Ribes vied with the local de-signs by the likes of Adolfo, Oscar de la Renta and Kasper. The splendor of the museum was matched by the splendor of the clothes. For anyone who basn't yet decided upon what to wear on New Year's Eve, the stores are filled with versions of the new grandeur.

It's a chance for women in a mood to have fun with clothes to get on the bandwagon while the style is new.

it needn't take a king's ransom. though of course it can. Ohrbach's has a shipment of black taffeta skirts with flounced, ruffled hems or black velvet borders for $19.99. It also has the printed peasant blouse, designed to dip negligently off one shoulder, for $16.99

How Writers Navigate Their Sea of Books

By NAN ROBERTSON

Alistair Conke's solution was geography: Nora Ephron's was divorce; James Dickey's was the alphabet and Erica Jong's may well be a house in the

They all write and all love books and were asked, along with other bibliophiles, how they organize their private libraries.

Some, such as Mr. Dickey—the poet who broke through to prose with the powerful novel "Deliverance"—achieve sanity and control over their large collections with conventional systems. These include alphabetizing hy author and grouping books under subjects, na-tionalities or periods. But some have found inventive ways that ordinary souls would never dream of to put their hands on the right books right away.

Take Mr. Conke, celebrated commen-tator and chronicler, in print and on television, of America and Britain. He is probably the only New Yorker who thinks of his bookcase as a map of the United States His assemblage on America covers one entire wall of his Fifth Avenue study, with books on New England in the upper right corner, California down at the lower left and "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" anchoring the center. Or take Miss Ephron, Esquire columnist and feminist. The end of her first marriage and relief from library frauma came simultaneously.

From college on, she spent "huge amounts of money and time" acquiring books so she would look well read, among them treatises on "decoupage, which I couldn't care less about."

"By the time I was 33 years old I had thousands and thousands of books, which of course I could never find, which were all mixed up with my husband's books." He was Dan Greenburg. also a writer. Three years ago, they were divorced; and she decided to take "only what I really loved and probably would read again and that came to about 100 books."

Now she is married to Carl Bernstein, the Watergate reporter, but she has remained ruthless about keeping her library minimal. She treasures her Jaoe Austen, her Dickens, her Popular Library, all the Oz books, the dictionary, the Nationel Geographic Atlas and "about 85 others." Wheo the collection creeps up to 200, she carts the excess to the Strand Book Store and donates the paperbacks to a bospital. "I'm much happier now," sha says, "and my decision about books is part of the reason."

James Dickey adds be does not subtract He has an enormous library and has found peace through strict alphabetizing. He estimates that he bas 20,000 volumes stashed in his two-South Carolina homes, "both with a preponderance of poetry, with a great many novels and phlinsophical works and hooks of celestial navigation, which is a great thing of mine."

"I don't go by country or subject— I'm author-oriented," he says, putting Ireland's Yeats right next to Russia's Yeving Polymer Too many subjects overlap—Robert Ardrey can be zoology or metaphysics or political science. All I need is 'Ardrey' everything he wrote put under his name."

The poet doesn't find that many books a burden at all. "I wouldn't do without them," he said, sounding utterly relaxed.

By contrast, Miss Jong ('Fear of Fly-ing')' sounded panic-stricken. When asked how she organized her library she sighed deeply and responded, "It's a hopeless task." Her life in recent years has been peripatetic, and ber books are scattered across the country —in a rented house in California, in cartons in her New York apartment and as temporary lodgers with friends in between.

She is housebunting now, "I think a lot of writers are driven to huy a house in the country to have a place for their books," she said. When she had a system, it hegan by author, by subject and by period, and went on to "cataloging by whim."

For instance, she put "all the books that reminded me of each other on one shell, everything from novels by Colette and Jean Rhys to books by Germaine Greer and Sbulamith Firestone and pretty soon it grew into a whole case of books by and about women and the women's movement." Miss Jong said:

Leo Lerman, Vogue magazine's fea-tures editor and writer of volumes on Leonerdo, Michelangelo and the Metropolitan Museum, has a library as big as Mr. Dickey's but feelings similar to Miss Jong's. "I am overwhelmed," he said. He reported that his Il-room West Side apartment is "silting up" with books, and he closed off the dining room a year ago "when I could no longer navigate through it." It contains "a very large collection of what you'd call English Lit if you were teaching it—all the way from Beowulf to now."

"Every closet shoves books on you when you open the door—it doesn't make for happy living," Mr. Lerman said He has managed to isolate Proust in and near his bedroom, the Renaissance and art history and the Alcotts in the main workroom, foreign fiction.

in the main workroom, foreign fiction and history in the passageway. "Lots and lots of bound volumes of poetry are sitting on the dining room floor and under various tables—the wonderful thing is you can pick it up on the wing and read four thrilling lines and it nourisbes you for the day." Mr. Lerman concluded on an upbeat note.

If Mr. Lerman's problem is horizontal, with an overflowing apartment, that of Robert Gottlieh, Knopt's president and editor in chief, is vertical. He has a four-story house in Turtle Bay, on Manhattan'a East Side, "and there are books on all of them and on the stairs to carry up and down."

The library is the most organized.

Books he and his wife are about to read or have promised they will read are in the bedroom, as well as books that Mr. Gottlieb says he "can't bear to have more than a few feet away from me" at all times. "It's my private junk collection I turn to in times of need," he added mysteriously, "but it's not really junk." He would not disclose the titles, except that there's "not a the titles, except that there's "not a one by Knopf."

Like Mr. Lerman, Mr. Gottlieb, when he finally forces himself to weed out, gives books to the New York Public Library.

Frances Steloff of the Gotham Book Mart, long the most famous avant-garde hookstore in America, lives over-head, and occasionally brings some ex-cess down. I then take half of the

"A lot of what I sell will probably go east a bottle at a time in someone's luggage," a San Francisco wine merchant said. Both the Napa Valley Brut and the Cuvée de Pinot Noir sell for $7.80 in California. "We won't be competing with our own imports," Mr. Wright said. "But we're positioned in the full Moët champagne line. Dom Perignon is up there," be said, pointing toward the ceiling of his temporary office, "and we're here." He patted the surface of

Just above Domaine Chandon, the label chosen for the new line, is Moër's nonvintage champagne at about $10.

All champagnes are blends, Each champagne label represents a specific style and sometimes 25 or 30 wines are mixed to maintain that style year after year. Domaine Chandon is no exception. But its hlends must be approved at Moet beadquarters in

In addition to Mr. Mautiere, who spends about a third of his time in California, Moët also dispatched its head remuer, Lucien Dambron to Yountville to teach the Americans the art of remusge (or ridding, as it is known in California)—turning the upended champagne bottles every day or until the sediment settles on the corks.

All this activity takes place in a winery destined to become one of the shnwpleces of the Napa Valley, already a treasure trove of magnificent wineries. Domaine Chandon is a huge winery by Northern California standards. When completed, perheps in the spring, it will have storage and bottling facilities for seven million hottles.

Visitor facilities will include s tasting room, a retail sbop, a museum and, if the Napa County Board of Supervisors approves, a French country restaurant. County officials are wary of anything too touristy in what is still mostly a beautiful rural area.

"We want the restaurant very much," Mr. Wright said. "We bave e job of education to do bere. We want to show people that sparkling wine is more than something for special occasions. We want to show that it goes with meals, too."

Mr. Wright explained that sales were being confined to California for marketing purposes, "If wa spread it around the country, we'd have no way to learn who buye it and whether they come back for more. This is really our test marketing period." The sparkling wine-it will not be called champagne—that Celifornians are buying now under the Domaine Chandon lahel is a hlend of both the 1973 and 1974 vintages. The Napa Velley Brut has a very slight taste tinge to ... The Curic de Pinot Noir is almost a reserve salmon color sometimes called "eye of the cartridge" in France. The color is the result of the way the pinot noir grapes were picked and vinified.

The 1974-75 Cuvée de Pioot Noir is lighter in color. Eventually it may be made with the same golden color as traditional champagnes, hot Domaine Chandon people are waiting for public reaction. If it is good, they may keep the color the way it is.

At present all Domaine Chandon grapes are pur chased from nther grnwers. M. & H.'s nwn vineyards will begin to bear usable grapes next year. So far, 200 acres have been planted. Eventually an edditional 700 scres of vines are planned.

To dete, Domaine Chandon has kept s low profile. Even now the promotion hudget is almost nonexistent. There has been some good publicity, though, from e man who swears he will bave nothing in do with the stuff. Victor Bergeron—known to most people as Trader Vic.

Mr. Bergeron, bimself of French descent, says the French have smeared California wines for years. "Now they come in here, where the market is growlng and take business from our own wineries," hs said. "When you huy California wine you support California business and the money stays here."

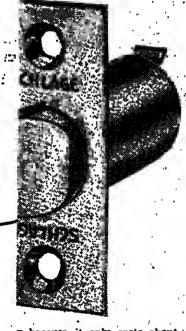

Trader Vic backs up bie anger with table-top announcements in his restaurants depicting himself and a terrified-looking Frenchmen. "We will not buy any of Domaine Chandon wines." he says.

holts that alide into a plate in the door frame when the key is turned, and they cost about $32 installed in New York suburban areas. If the recess has to be cut into a metal door the installation fee usually runs a little more.

Some models, like the Kwikset 880 Series, also have a revolving steel rod inside the bolt that makes it almost impossible to saw through. This lock also features tapered, steel reinforcing rings that prevent prying or pulling the cylinder out from the door as well as bolts that decurrence cylinder from the inside to prevent prying or twisting it off from the outside.

Locks that have both a spring latch

Locks that have both a spring latch and a deadbolt are usually either cylin-drical locks or what is called mortise. locks. The latter are beavy-duty units that are mounted in a recess of the door and have a double-locking action—that is a spring-loaded snap latch that locks-when the door is slammed shut and a separate deadbolt above it that is locked by giving the key ao extra turn. A good mortise lock will cost about $75 installed.

A mortise lock, when mounted on a strong door with a snug frame, is considered by many locksmiths to be one of the most secure locks around. Most models require that both the door knob and the knob that controls the deadbolt be turned when opening the door from the inside hut on some newer models one knob opens both bolts.

One brand, the Schlage "G" series, protects the lock mechanism from drill-mg or piercing by placing a metal plate under the decorative outside plate. This model also has a recessed cylinder, which makes it harder for burglars to pry the cylinder out.

Cylindrical locks that combine the spring latch and the deadbolt usually have a separate bolt or pin behind the spring latch. If the spring latch is forced open, the extra bolt still remains secure. But these locks are not considered to be as secure as a good mortise lock or a separate cylindrical deadbolt

There is one final point the security-conscious homeowner or apartment dweller must keep in mind: A lock can be no more effective than the door on which it is installed, and then only if it is properly installed by a competent locksmith or other qualified mechanic. The best lock will be almost useless on a door that fits loosely inside its frame, are on one that is flimsly constructed. or on one that is flimsily constructed and not securely mounted. And the best lock will also be poor protection if it is not correctly mounted with the right kind of bolts, screws or other fasteners.

T WAS SOME TIME after 10 o'clock on a Sunday evening. The man and the boy sat in the living room like tubs of unquickened cement, or lard in the absence of an energizing principle. Although they had started watching the professional football playoffs only the previous day, and must have gone to bed on Saturday night, and certainly had plugged the holes in their faces with an assortment of swills in the interim, it seemed that they had been motionless for a month, as if waiting for the TV been motionless for a month, as if waiting for the TV set to tell them it was all right to resume lives that had lapsed into parentheses. Had they talked? Of the male mind, an attic for sports junk, batting averages, unnecessary roughness. Do female the male American mind, an attic for sports junk, batting averages, unnecessary roughness. Do female American have such a space? If so, with what do they fill it? Details of feelings?

See the wild-eyed huyers slash at one another with their credit cards. Bloomingdale's! He fell upon a sword of indignation. He had just been to Bloomingdale's. seeking vainly to purchase Christmas presents for those people of whom he was afraid. Listen to them rhapsodize on "60 Minutes." His wedge had been

Admittedly, the man hated to shop. But if one had to shop, he approved of department stores, where the wares of the world were sensibly organwhere the wares of the world were sensibly organized under one roof. He considered department stores, in fact, to be one of American culture's several triumphs, right up there with plumbing and free poblic libraries. Bloomingdale's, however, is not a department store. It may once have been, back when LaGuardia was a man instead of an airport, but it has long since been Bendelized: that is, converted into a fen of boottiques.

Boutiques specialize in using up so much of our time that there's oot enough left over for what really counts in life, like love and work and professional football. If we are blank, we go to a houtique, whose purpose is ornamental. If we are defined, we go to a department store, whose purpose is convenience. Ornament is a way of purchasing someona else's definition. Ornamented, we are not our own names: we are someone else's labels.

The man, surprised at having rediscovered the trick of thinking, almost spoke to the boy. Bloomingdale's!

One doesn't go there with a list of things one wants

He saw in his living room the labels advance.

He saw, in his living room, the labels advance on him, a Gadarene of Guccis, Sooia Rykiel as Queen Kong. Look, he wanted to say to his son, if wa Kong. Look, he wanted to say to his son, if wa wear their tags, we can be bought. The man loathed clothes, and the petting of them. When he had been the boy's age, a salesman had sold him a sportscoat purportedly Ivy League. If was stitched up oot of used electric cels, it glowed in the dark like Las Vegns. In the olive-drab Ivy League, he had been an advertisement for the wrong self. Listen: I used to wear a tie as limp as a tongue, and stuff spoons in the breast pocket of my J. Press jacket. The snores of my loafers were scuffed. My brain was buttons down. And yet I lacked sincerity, a tweed that had been to Scotland and was the coarser for its state of the coarser for its state. soul, too, sustains knee injuries, needs elbow page

'Secret' Spots for a Discreet Rendezvous

Anyone can have an affair, although some people have them better than others. An affair, or at least the begins ning of one, ought to be conducted with a certain style. It also ought to have a certain privacy. Privacy is a matter of style, and sometimes it is a necessity, too. It is hard to be seen around town with someone's spouse other than your own.

The question, therefore, is where do The question, therefore, is where do you go for an encounter? We are oot talking about an assignation, although certainly an encounter can lead to that; we are talking about a meeting, a rendezvous, a chance, perhaps, to simply sit and talk privately in a place where no one will know you. This is remarked.

It is oot easy to find these secret-places, but without them a romance may wither. Also, it will not be much fun. One person's secret place is not another's, of course, and for years there have been people who have arranged rendezvous at Luchow's on 14th Street and D. J. Morierty's on 14th Street and P. J. Moriarty's on Third Avenue simply because you would never think to find them there. Another good place for them to go has been the bar at Trader Vic's in the Plaza. They never meet anyone they know there, either. Besides that, the bar has hanquettes. It is easier to kiss and hold hands when you are on a

Similarly, P. J. Clarke's is now coming into favor as a place for a rendezvous. This is not the old P. J. Clarke's on Third Avenue; it is the new one io Macy's basement. Who would expect to find you there?

Perhaps the most celebrated series of rendezvous took place in Noel Coward's "Brief Encounter," where the lovers met in a railway station. Even then that was considered a generally unsatisfactory place, and nowadays it probably would be out of the question. Railway stationa have no class.

Recently, a number of New Yorkers were asked where they would go for a rendezvous. The New Yorkers were not asked because they have had, or are having, or are even thinking of having an affair. It is possible that some of them have, but that is beside the point. These people were asked simply because they get around town The question they were asked was:

Where would you go to be alone with someone if you did not want to be recognized? Here are their answers:

Jack Howard, chairman of the executive committee of E. W. Scripps Company, and chairman of Scrippe-Howard Broadcasting—"I'd go to Gage & Toll-ner's in Brooklyn."

Doris Cole Abrahams, theatrical producer—"If I were having a secret liaison, I'd never go to some little un-known bistro. I'd go to 21 or El Morocco, where I'd be seen. If you go to

A "hair of the dog"—that is, more alcohol—is also consterproductive. It will probably relieve temporarily the discomfort of a hangover, but once again the body's fatigue sensors will be dulled and the needed rest postponed, only delaying—not avoiding— the moment of reckoning.

Of course, slowhol itself plays a direct and crucial rolo in hangover. Alcohol and crucial role in hangover. Alcohol dulis the brain mechanisms that regulate body chemistry, disrupting the normal balance of water and salts. While the alcohol level in the blood rises, much water is lost from body tissue, possibly causing the thirst of hangover. Alcohol also causes blood vessels to dilate, and hangover headache is believed to result from the swelling of cranial arteries.

Alcohol irritates the mucous membranes that line the gastrointestinal tract, which undoubtedly causes the hearthurn causes and voniting common to overiodulgers. To minimize this effect, alcohol experts suggest eating a decent amount of food—especially a fatty protein food like cheese or milk—before drinking.

The amount and kind of alcohol consumed, the rate at which it is drunk and the mixers used can also influence hangover symptoms. The alcohol content of various drinks ranges from 4 percent for beer and 10 percent for wine to 57 percent for 100-proof rum and 80 percent for Polish spirits. Scotch, gin and brandy are 40 percent sicohol, bourboo is 45 percent and vodka, 46. Bear in mind, though, that eight ounces of beer contains roughly the same amount of alcohol as a shot of whiskey.

The Truth About Hangovers: They're All in Your Head

The level of alcohol reached in your blood can also infloence bangover (and directly related to the degree of drunkenness). Eating before drinking slows the absorption of alcohol from the digestive tract into the blood, better enabling liver enzymes to metabo-lize the alcohol as it is consumed.

Carbonation speeds the absorption of alcohol (which is why) champagne goes to the head so fast), so using water instead of soda is helpful. It is also wise to sip your drinks slowly (taking 30 to 45 minutes to finish one), to drink well-diluted drinks and to continue eat-ing while you're drinking.

The different alcoholic beverages also contain varying amounts of substances known as congeners, toxic chemicals present in amounts of less than ooe percent that result from fermentation and maturation of the liquor. Alcohol is rapidly eliminated by the body, but congeoers are not and thus they may be around the next day to contribute to hangover symptoms.

Coogeners are substances that add flavor to liquor. The main one—fusel oil—is mostly removed during distilla-tion and sold for paint solvent. Vodka and gin bave a very low congener con-teot; blended scotch has four times more than gin, and brandy, rum and pure malt scotch have six times more. Bourbon contains the most — eight times more than gin and 30 times more than vodka. On one experiment, researchers produced hangover by giving congeners in water—with no alcohol. In another, a high-congeoer drink (o laboratorymade superbourbon) produced more and looger lasting hangover symptoms than either vodka or regular bourbon. Despite the attendant miseries, many Americans seem to take pride in their hangovers, regarding them perhops as proof of their hig night, the more miserable io the morning, the more fun they must have had the night before. Quite the contrary, says Dr. Chafetz, outhor of the recently published book, "Wby Drinking Can Be Good For You."

A person is more likely to get a hang-over after drinking in a situation where he is tense or emotionally distressed. In fact, guilt, fear and anxiety about In fact, guilf, fear and anxiety about drinking can predispose o person to hangover. When research subjects were given huge amounts of alcohol in o relaxed permissive setting, no one got a bangover. In another study, those who most disapproved of drinking (but did it anyway) got the worst hangovers. The moral is to drink without remorse and only when you feel relaxed and hanvy and not tired.

Although there is a direct relationship between the amount of alcohol consumed and the likelihood of haogover, there are also some people who seem able to drink a lot and still feel fine the next morning and others who get hong over from seemingly minute amounts of alcohol.

Uodoubtedly, some people have an unusual sensitivity to alcohol or various congeners, and some people have guilt-induced hangovers—they think they deserve one after their indulgence, so they get ooe.

There are ot least as many myths about preventing hangovers as about curing them. But, in fact, it does little good (except inasmuch as you think it will do good) to take various combi-nations of vitamins or over-the-counter medicines, to sober up the night before, eat before going to bed, or drink lots of water before the alcohol.

The only guaranteed preventive is to avoid alcohol altogether, or consume it with great circumspection. Given the agonies of some hangovers, it is a won-der that they are so rapidly forgotten when the next opportunity arises to

The President-elect is also fond of The President-elect is also fond of chicken, especially Southern fried chicken with potato salad, or a chicken casserole. And like any native of the Deep South he has a weakness for Brunswick stew or barbecue. According to his friend, John Pope, Mr. Carter has even been known to join a crowd at brother Billy's certica to be been to be the control of at brother Billy's servica station to barbecue pork, beef or even goat.

Mr. Pope recalled Mr. Carter's fondoess for ham and red-eye gravy. Mr. Pope and his first wife, Marjorie, often spent weekends with the Carters in Atlanta. They took in a Georgia Tech football game on Saturday afternoon, then dined and danced and stayed at the Heart of Atlanta First Parkets Par the Heart of Atlanta Hotel. On several weekends, Mr. Pope remembered, they would drive 12 miles outside of the city to Aunt Fanny's cabin, an old slave shanty that is now an expensive restau-rant. Its decor includes framed ads for slaves, and young black waiters sing the menu to the customers and perform "buck dances" on table tops, There Mr. Carter would dine oo ham, red-eye gravy and a variety of his favorite vegetables.

But Mr. Carter's favorite meal is meat and potatoes. Give him a juicy broiled sirioin steak (rare), o salad with Roque-fort dressing and he's in hog heaven. Not just any old sirioin. Only the best:

Not just any old sirloin. Only the best. Mr. Carter especially likes a 12-to 14-ounce, two-inch thick strip.
The Joel Thomases, lifelong friends from Smithville, Ga., entertained the Carters the night before Thanksgiving and served the President-elect steak, baked potatoes and coffee.
"Usually when he comes down he'll say just fix me some sausage," said Barbara Betsy Thomas. "He loves that, and he loves salami, but I declare, the reason I had steak that night was be-reason I had steak that night was because I was having other people and I reckoned that would be the quickest

But Mr. Carter is basically neither a fussy nor a big eater. "He ote whatever was put in front of him on the plane," said an aide, Greg Schneiders. The President-elect likes small meals and usually nothing more than coffee and jmce for breakfast, except on weekends when he is likely to eat eggs and grits, sausage or bacoo and bis-

Mr. Carter is also a light drinker. He is known to cojoy one or two Scotches with water before meals, occasionally takes a daiquiri, and once returned from Mexico with a bankering for margaritas. But he did not drink during the campaign and plans to ban-ish hard liquor from White House receptions. Although he and Mrs. Car-ter celebrated their anniversary last July with a glass of champagne, and although she enjoys cooking with wine and plans to serve it in place of liquor for White House socials, wines almost never pass Mr. Carter's lips. He has coffee or tea or milk with his meals

Recently, while staying at Blair House in Washington,, Mr. Carter subsisted oo a very uncomplicated diet. "He's made no special requests like some of our other guests," a spokes-man for the guest house said Jimmy Carter ate the standard American fare: beef consomme, lamb chops, filet of beef and broiled chicken.

"He skipped breakfast half the time and just had toast and orange juice and black coffee upstairs in the red library." the spokesman said. "The other mornings he asked for a soft-boiled egg. He doesn't care about eat-ing very moch. He's a light eater."

But the President-elect probably won't be a stranger in the White House won't be a stranger in the white House kitchen. According to Mrs. Carter, before it became fashicoable for men to share the cooking, Jimmy Carter folled up his sleeves and pitched in "Wheo we were first married, Jimmy cooked as moch as I did," she said. "The family slivery scoked together." always cooked together."

Living Abroad: Athens Rediscovers Its Crafts

By STEVEN V. ROBERTS

HEN Yannis Travassaroa of Athens began using antique items in his fashion collection, a gypsy sold him 19 new belt buckles and claimed they were old. After the designer dis-covered the fraud, the peddler told him: That's bargaining, it's not my fault. Why did you believe me?" Today Mr. Travassaros—and his customers—know a lot more about au-thentic crafts and materials. A growing number of chic Athenians and foreign visitors are wearing his clothes, and last year he exported his first shipment to the United States.

"People are sick and tired of modern buildings, modern furniture and mod-ern fabrics, such as nylon," he explained the other day in his studio, a room of old wood and nubby cloth. "Synthetic things have filled up the Synthetics are fine for rainwear or sports clothes, he feels, but not for dressing up. "They give you a uniform look, a uniform quality," added Mr Travassaros, who works mainly with hand-loomed wool, cotton and silk.

The Travassaros trademark is a graceful blend of traditional styles with contemporary needs. One new design, silk wedding dress, is modeled on the gown worn by a Cretan cult statue dating from 1500 B.C. The only change was to cover the bodice—Cretan Women exposed their hosoms—and decorate the skirt with goat's wool trimming woven by nomads in northern Greece.

A favorite Travassaros technique is to take a piece of old embroidery— from a petticoat, a table mat, almost anything—and stitch it to a modern garment, such as a vest. But the price of antique needlework has jumped 15 times in four years, and the designer is training women to take up the craft and keep him supplied.

"In the old days, a gypsy would go into a village and tell a peasant, 'Give me that old jacket, what are you going to do with it? I'll give you a nice new blanket for it." Mr. Travassaros noted. "Now the peasants see TV, and they've woken up. They know the value of what they have. The ancients also crealed some marvelous jewelry, and today the most suc-cessful practicioner of this art in Athens is Ilias Lalaounis His Ihree midtown shops attract clients ranging from the Empress of Iran to high-boot-ed, long-skirted secretaries. He's also opened a new shop in Paris and hopes to head for New York within a year. Like Mr. Travassaros, the jeweler draws inspiration from Greek sources, and some of his early efforts were direct copies of museum pieces. Later, he began to adopt the traditional tech-niques and ideas to the modern women.

His classical motifs-rams beads, for example, or spirals—gradually evolved into starker designs that he likes to call "microsculpture."

Souviaki remains a favorite with the citizens of Athens

'More and more. I like the simplicity more and more, I take the simplicity and purity of abstract lines," explained Mr. Lalaounis, the fourth generation of his family in the jeweler's trade. "But this is very dangerous from a commercial point of view. The new rich have no ideas; they like busy things, elaborate things.

The new Lalaounis collection flows out of themes from pre-history. A bone tool has become a gold bracelet, end the jeweler says: "The tool was an ex-tension of the hand, the first victory of man over material. Now it's become jewelry for the hand."

One desigo stems from an arrowhead found in Australia; another from a cave painting of a horse in France. The symbol of the group is a stylized rendering of a fertility goddess worshipped in the Aegean Islands thousands of years ago

The inspiration for the spring collec-tion, already finished, comes from the shapes and shadows of Byzantine archilecture. Now the jeweler is working on his fall series, based on the theme of human movement. "I'll use every form, from ballet to football," he promised."

If Mr. Lalaounis does make it to New York, he'll join company with many Greek craftsmen. Some of the besl work in a more pliable and perishable medium than gold—food—and their masterpiece is the souvlakl, that tantalizing concoction of grilled meat, rolled in a piece of flat bread and garnished with onlons, tomatoes and imagication. The word 'souvlaki" comes from the Greek "souvla"-the metal skewer used to hold the meal—but versions of it crop up all over the Middle East.

One theory is that it started with the Turkish nomads, who wandered west from central Asia and called their spe-cialty "shish kebab." ("shish" is simply Turkish for "souvla."1

In your basic, garden-variety souv-laki, or kebab, cubes of meat are placed on a skewer and grilled over charcoal. For a second version, a large cone of lamb is roasted on a rotating, upright spit, while the cook slices off each serving. This is called "doner" in Turkish and "gyro" in Greek, but both words mean "turning."

One Athenian favorite is sometimes called "Adana kebab" after the town in southern Turkey where it originated. Hunks of ground meat are molded into fat, finger-like patties before being placed on the skewer for grilling. Savvas Adjemian, who makes this version on Mitropoleus Street in the old section of Athens, is a Greek of Armenian origin whose father was born in Adana. He says that business goes up by 30 percent every year, and one reason is the quickening pace of Greek

A second reason is health, since doctors recommend grilled meat to many diets, and a third is price Mr. Adjemian sells a souvlaki for about 20 cents, the same portion that would cost $1 or more in Times Square.

Mr. Adjemian guards his recipe like a family neirloom and will reveal only a few details: put onions in the ground meat, cook for three minutes. As customers crowded around his cash register he gave a small smile and sald: Once someone comes in and buys one, he's ours forever.'

Maintaining my usual caution, I avoided the omnipresent mirrors as I scurried through makeup and hosiery on the main floor. So it was in what I considered the total safety of pots and pans that I caught sight of myself in a full-length mirror. How shall I describe this? Well, for one thing my hair seemed to have blown into spikes. making me look like a frightened cat in an animated cartoon. And then, for another thing . . . ob, never mind.

What I really want to know is why they have mirrors in a hardware department? Do some people wish to see how they look bolding a meat thermometer? In any event, the salesperson was out back hunting for my concept of an omelet pan ("Not a trying pan, the sides should be kind of bendy.") Thinking myself to be alone, I said, evidently out loud, "I swear I shall never go into Bloomingdale's without getting my hair done or I may end my life by slitting my wrist with the sharp edge of my charge a-plate." There was a clang as a pan dropped and the very pretty young garl grabbed my arm and muttered, "Oh my God, lady."

Resolution Two: Since I believe, with Fletcher Knebel, that "It is now proved beyood doubt that smoking is one of the leading causes of statistics,"

I will quit smoking in 1977 or I will not quit smoking. But I won't discuss it. Three: I will smp telling the plots of television commercials to perfect strangers. But listen. Did you see the one in which this woman is in a supermarket making a telephone cail? You can tell it's a supermarket because you can see all of the counters and her shopping cart is full of groceries. What she is saying on the telephone (with nobody watching that cart) is "Helen. I've been wondering. Whet do you use for occasional irregularity?" Now, I just can't leave it there. I want to know more about Helen. I want to know about Helen's husband. Does he say "Who was that oo the phone? Janice? Where was she? She was in the A & P and wanted to know what?" Okay, I'm stopping. I've stopped. Four: I will not try to be reasonabla with my 13-year-oid daughter. It just confuses her.

Five: I will not try to be chic, everbecause I see that for me this is a doomed endeavor. Last January, for reasons that seemed quite sensible at the time, I agreed to appear on the "Tomorrow" show. For the occasion I selected a rather billowing flowered, caftan, which I then modeled for my loved ooes. My oldest son took one look and remarked, "I don't know, I think I liked it better on the sofa." Thus rebuked, I basteoed to Saks where I bought a rather slinky red dress with ruffles around the neck and down the

Actually, we were getting through it pleasantly until we got to the big closing number—"The Blue Danube," naturally—in which the or-Danube, naturally—in which the orchestra and the corps de ballet were joined by what was, I guess, the male chorus. The members of this group looked like slightly overweight businessmen who'd just come from the office. They filed io more or less at random, and they sang somewhat haphazardly. Even so, the children would probably have accepted the whole thing if their father, wandering through the room at the moment, hadn't muttered "Who are they—the season subscrib—" Who are they-the season subscrib-

Fight: I will remember that there are no foolproof ways of reforming yourself, and I will be wary even of composing lists. A man I know (he's in advertising; in case that's relevant) was advised by his therapist to make two lists. One was to include the things he admired about himself. The other was to enumerate his failings, character defects, rottee habits and so forth. Well, it turns out that the "bad" list practically wrote itself. In oo time at all he had pages and pages of misdeeds so deplorable that one feels he oeeded only a little help to produce a best Eight: I will remember that there are only a little help to produce a best seller. Personal Finance: Self-Pension Woes

By RICHARD PHALON

EONARD KIRSCH is a hard scrambling, middle-aged New York City public relations man who got a rude jolt wheo he talked to bis savings bank the other day. He was told he would have to wait for almost another decade before. he could lay so much as a finger on money he has been depositing in a retirement account for the last three

"It was like a bombsbell," Mr. Kirsch said. "I knew I would bave to pay a penalty to get the money out, but now they tell me I can't touch it at all. I want to have the right to get it when I need it."

It is a plight that bundreds of thousands of other self-employed individuals—doctors, dentists, lawyers, retailers and insurance agents—may also find themselves in if the Internal Revenue Service does not soon clear up ambiguities that appear to be fuzzing the rules on how the Keogh self-retirement plans work.

Keogh plans—named after one of their major spoosors, the former Congressman trom brooklyn—are big business. At last report deposits in them totaled more than $4.3 billion, a pragmatic tribute to the major tax advantages the plans offer.

Keogh plans permit self-employed people like Mr. Kirsch to deduct each year as much as 15 percent of what they earn (up to a maximum of $7,500 annually), tuck the money into an insurance annuity mutual fund or sav-ings bank, and pay no taxes on the interest or dividends credited to the account until they retire.

Mr. Kirsch said he did his homework carefully. "I even talked to the Internal Revenua Service before I talked to the bank," he says. He understood there was a trade-off on the tax advantages. was a trade-off on the tax advantages. His account would be frozen until he reached age S9½ and could tegally start drawing on it. Mr. Kirsch, who is now S0, knew any money withdrawn before that time would be taxed as regular income and in addition, slapped with a surcharge of 10 percent or more. "I was ready to take my lumps," said Mr. Kirsch, "but when they told me I couldn't touch the money at all until I turned 59½, I was dumbfounded."

ed."

"It was contrary to averything the bank told me when I set up the plan," he continued, "and contrary to everything I had been told by the I.R.S." It is not clear how many savings and commercial banks in New York have turned off the spigot on early Keogb plan withdrawals, even though the law — by specifying penalties — seems to suggest that they are allowed.

Some banks, however, argue that a close reading of the law suggests that early withdrawal is a double-edged sword. An early withdrawal may sub-ject not only self-employed people like Mr. Kirsch but the banks themseives to additional tax liability.

"It's not at all clear," says G Savings Bank Association. "If banks are party to what the Ladecides is a prohibited transactuthey could be liable to a 5 percent on all the money on which they withdrawals." early withdrawals."

Mr. Kirsch's bank, the Bowery ings, is in the process of getting our letter explaining to its Keogh pholoders why—except in cases of ability—they can't touch their most until age, 59½.

The Bowery, according to John Ol a senior vice president, has aggress ly pursued Keogh plan business, "has by far tha largest share in Both the Bowery and the New state Savings Bank Association taken their dilemma to the It Revenue Service. An LRS. spok says the question is "under atudads that "we don't have a rulpresent."

Agnes de Mille. dancing in 'Rodeo' in 1942, and,

at the right, today.

"I don't know that I'll do much more that's new," Agnes de Mille said, re-flecting on her long career as a choreographer. "I have come to a change io. my life. It's not a diminution. It's just different. That's the biggest discovery I've made."

On May 15, 1975, at 5:50 P.M., ooly two hours before she was to go on stage with her company in New York. Mass de Mille suffered a stroke that left ber, at first, near death, then paralyzed on the right side. Last fall, after a year, of rehabilitative therapy, she was able to supervise the restaging of her 1942 ballet, "Rodeo," for the Jorfrey Ballet. The vihrant new production looked as fresh as a premiere, re-worked in all its dramatic details and bursting with exuberant spirit. A hit of the Joffrey's engagement last October, it is also the success of the company's current season at the City Center. Unfortunately, Miss de Mille was unable to see the Joffrey production on stage until last week. On Oct. 14, at President Ford's White House dinner in honor of Martha Graham, Miss de Mille became ill and had to re-enter a New York hospital.

Miraculously, she came out in better health than when she went in. "Nobody explained, but I regained my balance," the 67-year-old choreographer said. "I can walk now." However, Miss de Mille still needs a came and, for writing, sha has trained herself to use her left hand.

She can indeed write, as readers of her stylish, candid prose have always known. Recently, after her last hospital stay sha put the final touches on a new book—another autobiographical volume about herself and the promi-nent families from which she is de-scended. Henry George, the social economist and proponent of the single-tax reform, was her mother's father. Cecil B. De Mille, who capitalized the D, was her uncle, and William de Mille, the playwright and screen writer, was her father.

"When I was here scrabbling in New York, my family ruled Hollywood," she said the other day in the East 9th Street apartment in which she settled just before the war, determined to hit the big time. She did—with "Rodeo" and with her choreography for the 1943
Broadway musical, "Oklahoma!" followed by "Carousef," "One Touch of Venus," "Brigadoon" and other popular

Letter to 'a Soldier'

To give the Jolfrey dancers a sense of her own excitement about 'Rodeo" when she performed in its premiere 34 years ago, she read them a few days ago, she read them a few days ago a letter she'd sent to "a soldier" during World War II. This was Walter-Prude, oow her husband and until last Spring a vice president of Hurok Con-certs. The letter detailed the anxieties —and triumph —of the occasion. Looking relaxed in a turquoise Chinese jacket with matching yarn in the curled-up braids of her hair, Miss de mile addressed the dancers following a rehearsal in a City Center studio. "I had never had a success until Rodeo," she told them. "But because of the ballet, I had grown to love America. I understood it better because of the love the beauter because of the love for this soldier. He was from West Texas and he had a feeling for the earth."

"Rodeo" has a plot. A tomboyish cowgirl places away for the head wrangler but is lassoed romantically by her pal, the champion roper, after she sheds her riding breeches for the femininity of a pretty dress. To Miss de Mille, the work's Americana is contained in the idea "of all those anonymous people who had lived good lives, and that was what was behind the baland that was what was behind the bal-

To help the Joffrey dancers capture the flavor behind her distillation of folk dances, Miss de Mille urged them, even commanded them, to drop their balletic manners. Speaking generally, she noted that "one of the common faults of nonacting dancers is that when they stand looking at something they stand rooted in a 'position' and that is a stance the human body never assumes naturally. I think theater is a communication through living bodies." Artistic Credo

Summing up her artistic credo, Miss de Mille continued: "Dance is communication, theater is communication. It can be through the body, with speech and through the voice Dance is equivalent to the voice and it's a refinement of certain techniques. "The reason theater is different from our ordinary life is that you are making a statement that has to be witnessed and shared, And that is why I object to certain moderns who don't communicate anything. They are doing studies—a technical study for something. And they get grants."

To Miss da Mille, dance gesture is based on emotional motivation. It is

To Miss da Mille, dance gesture is based on emotional motivation. It is a quality of movement she feels she shares with Antony Tudor, whom she introduced to this country, and with Jerome Robbins, who has called her one of his models when he was a novice choreographer in Ballet Theater in the early 1940's. the early 1940's.

"Before I die," she said, "I'd like to see classes in pantomime. It would apply not just to my work but to Jerry's and Tudor's. We're all the same. My style of pantomime, which is very basic and perfectly natural, is close to acting, legitimate acting."

"Telling Them Why"

It is the meaning of the dance ges-tures in "Rodeo" that Miss de Mille pol-ished up last week Vernon Lusby and Paul Sutherland, her two assistants, had done the initial rehearsals. At this phase, she said: "The dancers knew the steps, I was doing the thing I can do—which is telling them why they're doing what they're doing,"

In this respect, Miss de Mille func-tions as the theatrical director that she really is. Her disability no looger allows her to demonstrate the steps and style through her own body. But her directional techniques are more than testimony to her will to restore her creative energies. They are effective by any standard. A sharp verbal image here and another one there, and Miss de Mille had defined every dramatic situation at every moment within 'Rodeo.'

When, for example, the cowgirl hopes to get her man by putting on her dress, Miss de Mille sized her up this way: "You look up like a little child. You are asking, 'Do you like me in my little dress?' You come out like a Christmas tree. You don't have to do anything. That's the secret of love. Believe me, I learned it. I kent trying trying. "I'm I learned it. I kept trying, trying. 'I'm the greatest, I'm the greatest.' That's not heing lovable." Plans for Future

Asked about her plans for the future, Miss de Mille remarked she had been urged to write "about my hospital experieoce simply because it would be a word of comfort to others." Several months after her stroke, a clot was found in the carotid artery in her neck. The artery was removed and replaced "with a piece of plastic," she said, "I made a great point of not knowing the danger." But to write about it would be "too painful."

Instead, Miss de Mille looks forward to restaging her ballets. Even if she feels she cannot create new works, she has plans to rework "A Rose for Miss Emily," her ballet derived from William Faulkner's famouse story, as part of an all-de Mille program by the Boston Ballet io May.

She is also awaiting the publication of the book she has just completed. The title, suggested by her husband, is "Where the Wings Grow." She explained, "It's from a statement that Martha Graham made to a student—to John Butler—when she said, 'Hold your back straight, never forget that's where the wings grow."

As a family history, the book will begin with the Civil War, when one of Miss de Mille's ancestors married a Japanese "and became the second Caucaslan woman to enter Japan." More personally, the volume is about Miss de Mille's early years in upstate New York. "I had the great good fortune of a childhood in the wilderness, in Sullivan County."

The title is also obliquely related to the flights of fancy she experienced then. "It's about the memorles, the hallucinations I had as a child about the woods." To Agnes de Mille, "the sound of the whippoorwill was also the screaming of a soul."

Film: Streisand Soups Up a Classic

By VINCENT CANBY

ME'S A LIKABLE KID, loaded with talent, and still uoknown it the start of her career. He's a star, not just any star, but a superstar, at the end of his. They meet and ignite. For an all-too-orief instant as time is computed in the galaxies, their love flares -how should I put it?-incandescently. Then the momentum of their lives separates them as she goes on to become the brightest new star in the firmament while he, has been that he's rhout to become, slides back down fame's ladder into oblivion soup. He implodes.

When this was made as "What Price Hollywood?" in 1932, it was based on a story credited to Adela Rogers St. John, directed by George Cukor, and starred Constance Bennett as the ingenue. What with one thing and another, it inspired The New York Time's film critic to write, "Once you have been divorced by a polo player and have had your director commit suicide in your home, there is nothing left but rural France."

Things improved with the 1937 remake (as "A Star Is Born") that starred Janet Gaynor and Fredric March and was directed by William Wellman, by which time the original story was being credited to Mr. Wellman and Robert Carson. Things peaked, though, in the 1954 remake, again directed by Mr. Cukor, which had a screenplay by Moss Hart and starred James Mason and Judy Garland in what was probably the greatest performance of her career. The latest version, which opened Saturday at the Ziefgield and Baronet Theaters, is a transistorized remake, louder than ever, but very small in terms of its being about anything whatsoever. The setting is oo longer Holly-wood and movie-making, but the coo-lemporary rock scene, its stars are Barbra Stre'sand, who plays an unknown singer as if she were the wolf disguised rs Red Piding Hood's grandmother, and Kris Kristofferson, who plays the fading rock star whose last decent act. you might say, is passing oo the torch of fame to Barbra, who, of course. looks perfectly capable of knocking him down and taking it away from him anyway.

According to the credits, the film was directed by Frank Pierson, who won an Oscar for his screenplay for "Dcg Day Afternoon," and it was written by John Gregory Dunne and Joan Didion, who worked on it as a team, and by Mr. Pierson. The dominant personality of the production, however, is Miss Streisand's, in addition to being the film's star, she is its executive producer, takes credit for its "musical concepts." contributed her own wardrobe and collaborated on two of its best songs, "Evergreen" and "Lost Inside of You."

As long as this "A Star Is Born" attends to music, it is not at all bad. There is souped-up excitement when it is recording the stars' recording asssions, their giant rock concerts and their benefit performances, and when it is getting them into and out of h; 3terical crowds via limousine, ambulaoce and sometimes helicopter. The excitement is suddenly geomine whan Miss Streisand sings, but the drama that centains it is as bogus as the star's performance when she pretends to re Esther Hoffman, uoknown singer.

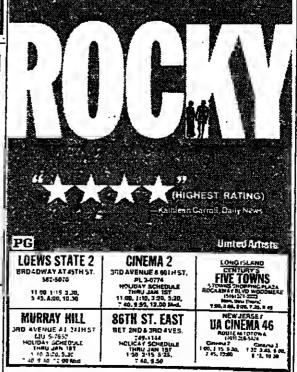

There's also something completely bogus in the pairing of Miss Streisard and Mr. Kristofferson, who, as loversere less exciting than Kiog Kong and Jessica Lange. It would be easy to say that it's not Mr. Kristofferson's fault, and the smaller of but I'm not sure it isn't. He walks through the film looking very bored.

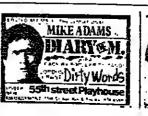

Miss Streisand, at least, attempts to act, delivering with much simulated passion a line such as, "You can trash your life, but you areo't going to trash mine!" Or, when Mr. Kristofferson dis-covers her at the piano and asks what she's playing, "Just a little something I wrote, hoping it will be a sonata when it grows up." Now that she's her own executive producer she cao't blazze lines like that on Ray Stark.

What Miss Streisand does is not act ing. She's a queen condescending at her own court cameraman, which ex plaios, I suspect, why even a couplof semi-nude love scenes have the effect of being anti-erotic. One suspect she, not the director, is the one whyelled "cut" just before the camer would have glimpsed a bare Streisan breast.

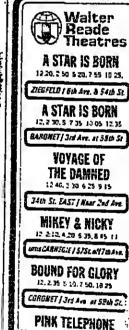

She never plays to or with the other actors. She does "A Star is Born" a a solo turn. Everybody else is a back-u musiclan, which is okay when she belting out a lyric, but distinctly od when other actors come into the sam

One is reminded of the slightly glam-orous aspects of war with scenes of the actual inductions into the armed forces of James Stewart, Clark Gable and Tyrone Power. And views of Hitler, and lyrone rower. And views of inter, President Roosevelt, Churchill, Field Marshal Montgomery and General Esenhower, Bob Hope, De Gaulle (entering Paris), pombings, evacuated children, the Battle of Midway and scrap drives, among many others, indicate the reality and some of the concomitant levity of the period.

the reality and some of the concomu-ant levity of the period.

The bombing of Pearl Harbor to the accompaniment of "I am the Walrus" seems a dubious sort of irony. But GL's reading letters from home to the background singing of "Yesterday" is genuinely effective and poignant. One can't fault the artistry of the composers of "Yesterday" or "Fonl on the Hill" or such artists as Helen Reddy or Elton John or the London Symphony and the Royal Philharmonic Orchestras. But their identities here, like the film's fictional movie excerpts, remain fairly mysterious to the untutored.

The producers' intentions, as noted, appear to be good. But their collage of conflict and music evolves as an uoresolved tussic between realism, seemingly weak satire and the tunes so dear to the Woodstock generation.

This film has been rated PG ("Parental Guidance Suggested"), probably be-cause of World War II bombings and the like, none of which, in all like-lihood, have not been seen before by the small fry on their television screens.

Film: Just Another Shaggy Dog

Now is the time, of course, for all good men to be kind to man and dumb animals. But "The Shaggy D.A.." which bounded into local theaters on Christmas Day, puts that wonderful concept to a severe test. As the sequel to "The Shaggy Dog," Walt Disney's 1959 moneymaker, "The Shaggy D.A." is a farce with all the witless energy of an unrestrained Great Dane puppy and, thankfully, a cast and director who generally avoid taking themselves or the free-wheeling plot seriously. the free-wheeling plot seriously.

You may recall that "Shaggy Dog" involved a teen-ager who was turned into a sheepdog fairly regularly because of the magical power of a "Borgia" scarah ring. This time, as a married man, father and lawyer in the factor of Does he again is being person of Dean Jones, he again is being transformed into that woolly canine while campaigning for the district attorney's office against that dastard.

Naturally, the story line is incredible and convoluted enough to give an uninhibited cast plenty of opportunities to Clown for, unfortunately, a minimum of real laughs. However, between continuous chases, pie-throwing binges and dogs that talk like James Cagney, Edward G. Robinson and Mae West, Dean Jones manages to make the dogharried D.A. candidate a mildly comic, if improbable, gent. Suzanne Pleshette, in her first film role in five years, plays his wife in amiably tongue-in-cheek style and Shane Sinutko is impish as their pre-teen son.

- Keenen Wynn is, let's say, an outrageously broad villain who gets his just deserts, animal style. And, among many others, Tim Conway does his shtick as a fairly droll, dead-panned iec-cream vendor who naïvely thinks his pet has suddenly become a talking sheapedor.

South Africa Bans

'Comedians' Play

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 26 (Agence France-Presse) — The play "Comedians" by the British playwright Trevor Griffiths has been banned by the South African censors because of the use on stage of "hlasphemy and obscene language."

"Comedians," which was voted by several publications in Britain to be the best play of 1975 and which recently opened in New York, began a run 10 days ago at the Market Theater, an avant-garde playhouse that has opened its gates 10 multi-racial audiences.

The dialogue includes the expression 'Jesus" as well as a common four-letter word with sexual connotations. The censors' decision came after several pro-tests from sections of the public, it was reported here. Ironically, however, excerpts from the play were featured last week on South Africa's national televi-

Frank Corsaro, surveying a wall on which bung the first exhibition of his art—and a one-man show, at that tried to sound offhand and modest. "In my household I'm known as Grandpa Moses." the 51-year-old opera director said with only a bint of crowing in his voice. Twenty of his operatic caricatures have gone on display at the Cafe des Artistes, a restaurant at 1 West 67th Street. These drawings and 80 others will be auctioned off at a henefit for the New York City Opera

By DONAL HENAHAN

Mr. Corsaro makes no pretense to heing anything out an American Primitive, in the art sense. "This all began ahout 21/2 years ago, just before my son, Andrew, was horn. I started to dabble in watercolors and pastels. I never was able to draw as a kid. My brother had all the talent. But out of the blue, I found myself turning out these sketches.

Sense of Wonderment Mr. Corsaro the stage director has been drawing other things, such as mixed choruses of high praise and outraged velps from critics, for many years. But he finds that a sense of wonderment at his paydy discovered talent derment at his newly discovered talent for art still comes over him. "Every time I sit down, I can't believe I can do this thing. It's true of directing, too, and acting." Mr. Corsaro's professional life has included, besides theater and opera direction, interludes of acting on the stage and in movies.

The caricatures that Mr. Corsaro has done so far center around opera, but they are not always recognizably pinned to one person. Instead, be does a Mimi or a Violetta, for instance, with the intent of caricaturing all Mimis and all Violettas. Similarly, he has several sketches of music critics and, consider-ing the blistering he has sometimes suffered from the press, they are under-standably unkind. One drawing hang-iog in the Cafe des Artistes exhibition entitled "Retired Music Critic," consists of a head sbaped like a hard-boiled egg with one eye and lots of purplish-pink veins. One noteworthy feature of Mr. Corsaro's renderings of critics is

Corsaro Has New Designs on Opera

Caricatures of Igor Strevinsky and the characters Lulu and Elektra by Frank Corsaro, who plans to design sets for operas, as well as direct them that not one seems to bave ears. Specific likenesses do turn up in the collection: Composers such as Dehussy, Stravinsky, Leoncavallo and Puccini are caught by Mr. Corsaro's brush. And more than one of the singers seems unmistakably to be Beverly Sills.

Mr. Corsaro's "dahbling" in caricature, he readily admits, has been an amateur's diversion up to now. But the art bug bas its fangs in him. "I'd like to get into oils next. I'm also thinking about a studio-it's not fair to your family to work at home." In fact, the colleague whom Mr. Corsaro envies most right now is Zero Mostel, a serious painter who has "this great studio with canvases all over the place."

Mr. Corsaro has his own big plans, however. He not loog ago designed the cover for the score of Thomas Pasatieri's opera, "Signor Deluso," and is dreaming of designing his own production of Wagner's "Ring." "I've been fooling around with doing it myself. David Gockley of the Houston Grand Opera has tentatively decided that we should do a 'Ring' to open the new opera bouse there when they get one built, so when they get the cornerstone laid,

Designed Opera Before

Mr. Corsaro experimented with designing opera once before. "I did some rough sketches for the City Opera's 'Poppea' and gave them to the designer, who then executed them. After that, I began to think I might as well do it on my own." When the right artist comes along, however, Mr. Corsaro doesn't mind letting him have his head.

He and the illustrator Maurice Sendak are planning a "Magic Flute" for Houston, probably for 1978. "Sendak is marvelous but he's nevar done an opera before, I told him not to worry about the designs but just to draw his idea of 'The Magic Flute' and we'd get a technician to carry out the actual sets and costumes. That's how Chagall did the Met's 'Magic Flute' and that's the way I'd work oo the 'Ring,' ton."

Before that, however, Mr. Corsaro will be back in the critics' gunsights as director of a new production of Busoni's "Doktor Faust" in July at Washiogton's Wolf Trap festival. He will be working with Ronald Chase, the multimedia expert who was Mr. Corsaro's collaborator in "The Makropolous Afair," "A Village Romeo and Juliet" and other opera productioos. "We're doing Faust as a sort of Cagliostro figure who is in his last days

Cagliostro figure who is in his last days and has visions of all he has left undone. Lots of scrims, divided stage, half dream and half reality, and a mixture of past, present and future." The City Opera's spring season will offer other evidences of Mr. Corsaro's versatility—or overweening amhition, depending on what view one takes of his talent. He is not only directing a triple bill consisting of Mozart's "The Impresario," Poulenc's "La Voix Humaine" and Stravinsky's "L'Histoire du Soldat," hut also his own extremely free translation also his own extremely free translation of the original French libretto of the io the country. The exhibition ranges from the exquisite models of Richard Meier, Tod Williams and Jaquelio Robertson to the amusing polemics of Stuart Wrede, who created a grasscovered cube as a prototype for a new landscape architecture, and of Stanley Tigerman, whose contri-hution, "Animal Crackers," uses hution. "Animal Crackers," uses the design of the Animal Crackers hox as the inspiration for a suburhan house. Unfortunately, none of these designs have much of anything to do with one another, and this the show's problem. It is a set of offerings, given like Christmas presents to the public, from architects whose works are fascinating on their own, yet do not come together to create any sort of meaningful whole.

What is most disturbing is that there is no attempt, either through choice of exhibitors or through any sort of accompanying text, to dis-cuss the whole question of models and their role in the process of making architecture. The show contains models for some buildings that have already been built, for some buildings that may someday be built, and for some buildings that will never be built at all and were never inteoded to be. The dis-play does not distinguish between these different kinds of buildings or ask bow the role of the model changes from one huilding-type to the next. Is a model for a purely theoretical hoilding that was never intended to be built really just a piece of sculpture, for example? This exhibition plays mum, avoiding the chance to stimulate what could have been a provocative ar-chitectural dialogue.

But if there is not much of a whole here, the parts are rather splendid. Some of the work, such as Mr. Meier's white house and Charles Gwathmey's bouse and studio, is familiar, but much more is new and genuinely exciting, and bappily reveals itself well through the medium of the model. Perhaps the finest of the unbuilt works here those buildings that, for oow and perhaps evermore will be visible only through models such as these—is a project called the Fountain House by Rodolfo Machado and Jorge Silvetti. It is an enormous villa designed for a real site and real clients io southern California, but unfortunately not

The house's main facade is an enormous screen facing a small body of water, its rear is a threesided series of steps, like an arena down which tumbles a constant waterfall. In the center of the waterfall is a door through which residents can exit from the bouse to stand on a platform in the middle of the waterfall.

Jutting into the body of water in the front is a gardeo peninsula shaped like Italy, and the house itself is full of allusions to Italian villas. It is a monumental homage to the idea of the villa and to the element, a house rich in fine details and it ately most meaningful for its suburb wedding of extravagant fantasy to architectural reality.

William Ellis, tou, combines fan-tasy with reality in "Band-Aid," a model for an urban-renewal scheme in Minneapolis that sug-gests a three-block-loog facade applied to three different huildings and positioned so as to appear to be peeliog off. A buge zipper con-oects the peeliog new facade to the old buildings, making the eo-tire project appear to be a witty cross between Claes Oldenburg and an urban-renewal authority.

There are several other impressive designs here that, like the Fountain House, reveal themselves through models in ways they could not on paper. John Hejduk'a mysteriously beautiful Bye House is shown in three different models, each of which contains some variation on this scheme in which three levels of masses appear to float against a huge background wall. The thinking behind Peter Eisenman's House II, a complex set of interlocking planes and blocks of interlocking planes and blocks of color, become understandable in plexiglass in a way that it is not on paper. not on paper. John Hejduk'a myste-riously beautiful Bye House is shown in three different models.

There is more an intriguin urban scheme by Mario Gandels nas and Diana Agrest that invertible cormal city grid to put build the oormal city grid to put buildings in what are usually streets and opeo space in the center of each city block, and a most remarkable piece of theoretical architecture by Raimund Ahraham entitled "House Without Rooms" that is a comole-sculpture of level changes within two parallel planes, among other exhibits. Music: Virgil Thomson's 'New' Symphony

By PETER G. DAVIS

N honor of Virgii Thomson's re-cent 80th birthday, the Amer-ican Symphony, conducted by Kazuyoshi Akiyama, gave the ork premiere of the composer's Third Symohony vesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall. Although composed in 1974, the symphony is essentially an instrumental expansion of Mr. Thomson's Second String Quartet, written 30 years previously.
In its new format, the piece retains its basic characteristics: direct melodic appeal, neatly clarified formal and harmonic procedures and a very sweet-tempered nature. Some of the orchestral dressing is quite surprising—assigning the opening chain-of-thirds theme to the brass, for example—but the entire transcription has been skillfully done and with a keen ear for instrumental effect. Not perhaps Mr. Thomson's most arresting achievement, the "new" Symphony is nonetheless a most friendly and engaging work.

The second contemporary American piece on the program was Benjamin Lees's 1958 Violin Concerto. Cooched in a mildly dissonant neo-classical veio that tries very hard for expressive intensity, the concerto ultimately seems defeated by its own well-digested but gray eclecticism.

The solo part gives the violinist a severe workout, ooe that Ruggiero Ricci not only relished, but tossed off with disarming technical aplomb. Ravel's "Tzigane" also posed no problems for Mr. Ricci, who played this show-stopper with a fine dash of heavira.

Possibly the rather drab impresident by Mr. Lees's concerto had ro thing to do with the orchestral formance, which lacked the kind tense, biting drive that the music pears to call for. Rimsky korsako "Scheherezade," the concluding work of the afternoon, fared much better this respect. Mr. Akiyama made the most of this perennial's slightly (add charms, even if the orchestra's execution may not have been the last wn. la instrumental brilliaoce.

"The audience that receives my music is a pop audience," he says, "If you don't appear as a pop musician, they talking about."

"I've always assumed that anything I put on records would be bought by everybody in the world," he adds with a small smile. "I like my music, from the simplest to the weirdest. And F know that there are people out there who have the same idea of a good time as I have."

At the moment, Mr. Zappa feels frustrated about reaching those like-mind-ed souls, and he blames his problems on a lack of support from his record company Warner Brothers. Mr. Zappa recently dismissed his manager of 11 years, Herb Cohen, and that meant the dissolution of his own label, which Warner Brothers had distributed, and his being absorbed directly into the Warner Brothers fold.

Two Stumbling Blocks' "Between me and the market place there are two stumbling blocks, the record company and AM radio. I love what I do. I just hate the stuff I have to do in order to do it. I love to write music, to record it, to play the guitar and to make people laugh and jump up and down at a concert. "But I don't know how to handle the record company. When my manager asked for an accounting of what they'd done to promote my album, even Mo Austin [the president of Warner Brothers] admitted it was 'appelling.'

When he isn't touring, Mr. Zappa rejoins his family in their home on Woodrow Wilson Drive, which snakes through the upper-canyon country between Hollywood and the San Fernando Valley. It's an area full of musicians far more commercially successful than Mr. Zappa, musicians who typity the "L.A. scene" of sleepy-eyed, laid-back country-rock. Mr. Zappa, nervous and cynical and witty, will have no part

"I like the canyons," he says, "but I don't have to live in the scene. Just like you don't have to be a junkie to live in New York. The Southern California crowd is like 1950's rhythm and blues. Not in sound, but in the interchangeability of the musicans. You hear the same studio musicians on every record. It's all very incestuous and very predictable.

Noting the emphasis on love themes in the music of these musicians, Mr. Zappa saya: "I've always found love songs to be the ultimate form of absurdist comedy. Anyone who would go around in public singing about his deep inner emotional hurt would probably be better off with serious medical at-

Publishing: A Pioneer at Road's End

By HERBERT MITGANG

FTER 10 trailblazing years through the thickets of modern fiction, poetry and essays, American Review, the longestrunning paperback literary periodical, will publish its final issue in September 1977. The semiannual "magazine of new writing," sponsored by Bantam Books, is closing its pages because of the volatile conditions in the paperback marketplace and because its editor thought the time had come for other, new literary voices in the ephemeral arena of ideas.

"Edmund Wilson-once said that thenational life of a serious magazine is about 10 years." Theodore Solotaroff, the founding editor, declared. "You pretty much work all your ideas in that period and you also go through your emotions. After 25 issues, the magazine had become a kind of holding action, instead of pioneering. It would be healthier for new writing if someone else developed his vision as I did 10 years ago, when I was 35."

The joint decision by Mr. Solotaroff and Oscar Dystel, president of Bantam Books, to cease publication with American Review 26 next year comes when the paperback magazine's circulation has declined from an initial 100,000 to about 50,000. Half of the copies are returned by paperback outlets to the

Although booksellers have been sympathetic to the consistently high literary-standards aet by the magazine, it has been unable to maintain a position up front for the impulse buyers of paperbacks. From New American Review 1 to the current American Review 25, the price has gone from 95 cents to $2.45.

Mr. Dystel said that the Bantam Books commitment to publishing new writers would continue. Mr. Solotaroff will remain with Bantam as a senior editor—a dual hat he wore while edit-ing American Review — developing original manuscripts for licensing to hardcover publishers and reprinting by

Among the books edited by Mr. Solotaroff in the last few years are James Welch's "Winter in the Blood" (Harper & Row), "Ending" by Hilma Wolitzer (William Morrow), "The Bourlotas For-tune" by Nicholas Gage (Holt, Rinehart & Winston), "Even Cowgirls Get tha Blues" by Tom Robbins (Houghton Mifflin) and Norman Mailer's 'Genius and Lust: A Journey Through the Major Writings of Henry Miller" (Grove Press).

In a decade of publishing, American Review bas undergone one title change —it was called New American Review to begin with—and has been sponsored by three publishers: Ne= American Library from 1967 to 1970, Simon & Schuster through 1972, and then Bantam. The magazine was published three times a year until last year, when the schedule was changed to one spring and one fall issue.

In its 10-year history, American Review first published sections of "Port-noy's Complaint" by Philip Roth, "Sexnoy's Complaint by Philip Roll, Sex-ual Politics" by Kate Millett, "In the Heart of the Heart of the Country" by William H. Gass, "The Savage God" by A. Alvarez, "Catholics" by Brian Moore. "A Sorrow Beyond Dreams" hy Peter Handke, The Lives of the Chil-dren" by George Dennison, "Beyond the Bedroom Wall" by L. Woiwode, and

"Ragtime" by E. L. Doctorow. It has also tantalized readers with works atill to come The outstanding example is Ralph Ellison's "Cadillac Flambe," which appeared in American Review 16 in 1973. The author of "Invisible Man" was then reported to be nearing completion of his long-awaited said, citing Saul Bellow, John Updike, Mr. Mailer and a half-dozen other authors. "But we've also published hundreds of unknowns. I hope our last issue will go out with a hang, instead of a whimper."

Before the year turns, it should be noted that in December 1876 a hook first came out that will be around for its Bicentennial, too. The story was based upon the author's memories of his childhood in Hannibal, Mo. The preface said that the volume was in-tended for "the entertainment of boys

Passers-By Can View Play In Club in a One-Time Bank

- By ALAN TRUSCOTT

When television and newspaper stories earlier this month described a police raid on the Eastwinds Club that uncovered alcohol, gambling and sex, many bridge enthusiasts assumed that New York's newest bridge club was in trouble.

But in fact the Eastwinds Bridge Center, coincidentally in the same building as the raided club, is alive and well and living at 1555 First Avenue, near 81st Street in some most unusual premises: a defunct hranch of the Chase Manhattan bank.

No other club in the city, or perhaps in the world, has storefront windows allowing passers-by to peer at the players, 17-foot ceilings, a vault and closed-circuit television cameras eight years too early for George Orwell's

Top Score for Defense Eastwind proprietors Lee Vines and

Joe Soll, sitting East and West, combined well in defense on the diagramed deal played at the club. They earned a top score by maneuvering a two-trick defeat of a game contract that was down one at other tables. West's jump to two diamonds over one club was pre-emptive, and North's double was negative, showing moderate hand further. East raised to three dia-monds, and North-South duly reached four spades. This was a slightly inferior rour spaces. This was a signty interior contract, clearly doomed to defeat hy East's possession of the spade queen.

Vines, who recently ended a nine-year stint managing the Colony Club—now the Manhattan Club—at 228 West 71st Street, had something to think about when his partner led the diamond time. The defense had two sure trums king. The defense had two sure trump tricks and two probable diamond tricks, but be wanted a fifth trick.

East assumed that South held four spades and two diamonds, together with two or three hearts and four or five clobs. In any event, there was no hurry to play hearts, since the club suit could not furnish any significant discards. And if South held a full opening bid, it was unlikely that West held anything of value outside diamonds. .

Accordingly, East overtook the diamond king with the ace and set about preparing for a club ruff. He led a club. and South won in dummy and entered his hand with a heart lead to the ace. The spade finesse lost to the queen, and another club was led.

The declarer won this in his hand, and persevered with trumps, but East was able to enter his partner's hand with a diamond lead to obtain the club ruff he had worked so hard for.

The result was down two, and the declarer bad missed a chance for an expert move. If he had led a diamond hefore leading trumps he would bave severed the defenders' communications and saved one important trick.

Screen: 'Search for Ark'

"In Search of Noah's Ark," now docked at about 100 theaters in the metropolitan area, is, like some quests, ideally motivated but frustrating. Since the account in Genesis is somewhat minimal, this documentation and re-enactment serves as a fairly reasonable attempt to explain questions that have plagued biblical and scientific scholars for thousands of years. But this delving into records and places in proof of the reality of Noah and his epic Ark adventure is largely a leisurely, pedantic hut picturesque journey that lacks the conviction of incontrovertible proof.

That "search" starts, of course, with a dramatization of Noah—here a benign, white-bearded patriarch—his family and that Ark of "gopher" (oak?) wood, a 450-foot leviathan, the largest wooden ship ever built by man, it says here.

While researchers present facts sub-stantiating the possibility of such an accomplishment, that feat done by so few still troubles a viewer.

Before the film wends its way to the 17,000-foot, glacier-crowned, storm and suspicion-ridden Mount Ararat on Turkish-Soviet border where the Ark landed, we encounter a succession of scholars and varied places such as Turkish villages and the American Earth Resources Satellite Center. New York City's first "Nutcracker"less Christmas in-decades is not totally bereft of ballet, for the Joffrey Ballet is soldiering along at the City Center 55th Street Theater with a couple of programs specially for children and the adults they bring with them.

What's more that your thought in dependent of neuro-innscular form—raises interesting plot possibilities, not to speak of a horner's nest of emisternological conundrums. Lacking eyes can the brain go on "seeing" in another seuse of the word? If thought his adchanical analogy, what will that chemistry produce in the absence of nerves, muscles and organs? Whatever the actual answers to such questions may he, Mr. McElroy has invented a plausible sequence of happenings. So a reader races ahead to learn what hap Plus will finally become.

But oh, the nassages he must strug-

But ch, the passages he must struggle through — the maddening sense of disorientation he must overcome. It is a little like trying to follow the directions to constructing a diabolically complicated children's toy, only you lack the pieces of the toy, and the in-structions have been mistranslated from the Japanese. "Imp Plus was ready to see these insides containing the Sun's flow. From outside his brain he looked into it through a gray-amher flesh, through glaring oxides of saffron cytoplasm, through platinum-fired sheaths of glue cells, even to the edge of that gold gland of flame. Imp Plus might as soon use for these baked potato ovals the Dim Echo's stored and pointless and (he saw) now lading word mitochrondria, as smell through it an acrid ill will now merely be remembered; or see an alien ellipsoid feeding on Earthly fire." And sometimes these passages can even be unlovely and monotonous.

Highly Independent

But it's possible that it all makes sense. It's possible that with sufficient patience the reader will discover here an animated verbal counterpart to those hugely magnified photographs of the human interior that Life magazine used to feature—or, failing that, a perfect vocabulary and syntax imitating thought becoming energy producing growth of never-before-imagined phys-growth of never-before-imagined physical forms.

It's possible that with "Plus" Mr. McEroy has advanced once again along the highly independent experimental path he has been blazing for himself with "A Smuggler's Bible," "Hind's Kidnap," "Ancient History" and "Lookout Cartridge" — all stunningly complex, occasionally brilliant, attempts to envision reality uniquely. But after a single reading of "Plus," one can't be certain. It remains only a possibility.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1976 Disks: From Beethoven to Woody Shaw

BEETHOVEN: Missa Solemnis, Heather Harper, Janet Baker, Robert Tear, Hans Sotter, Carlo Marla Giulini, conductor, New Philharmonia Chroux; London Phil-harmonic Orchestra, two disks, Angel (SB-3836).

There are a number of fine modern recordings of the Missa Solemnis, Beethoven's austere masterwork, but none that sweeps the field. Whather this new Carlo Maria Giulini version leaps automatically to the head of the list will remain a matter of personal preference.
Suffice it to say that it is a profoundly conceived, purposefully executed and generally well-sung account of a great piece of music.

It is Mr. Giulini's soloists who will arouse the most comment. Dame Janet Baker's evocative mezzo suits her music very well, and Hans Sotin offers both the low notes and the legato for a fine statement of the bass part. But Heather Harper for all the spinto richness of her tone, sounds rather effortful and constricted here and there, and Robert Tear's tenor is hardly the freest

But the Missa Solemnis is not a vehi-cle for soloistle display, and all four singers fit faithfully into Mr. Giulini's view of the score. His is a measured, devotional account that doesn't lack for drama when that is required. The New maina when that is required. The New Philharmonia Chorus sings with its cus-tomary strength and refinement, and the London Philharmonic catches the Germanic coloration of the orchestration to perfection But-apart from Beethoven himself-it is Mr. Giulini who is the determining factor here, and rarely has his affinity for large-scale choral works found a more apt expression.

Vox Turnabout (QIV-S 34643).

Mr. Comissiona's disk was recorded in 1974 prehance before he and birds.

Mr. Comissiona's disk was recorded in 1974, perhaps before he and bis orchestra had developed as far as they have today. These are perfectly respectable readings of both symphonies, to be sure. But there is a prevailing softness of attack (partly the result of a quadraphonic pressing heard on a stereo system?), and the slack phrasing suffers point by point in comparison with Mr. Davis and the Bostonians in the "Italian" Symphony.

son with Mr. Davis and the Bostonians in the "Italian" Sympbony.

Mr. Davis's versions, if they have a fault, slip just a touch into tense, unyielding virtuosity for its own sake. But this is only a tendency. Generally, these performances are full of hearty fervor and delicate lyricism as well as intensity. And the orchestra's playing and Philips's clear, immediate yet fully natural sound make this one of the finest Mendelssohn packages in the catalogue. John Rockwell

WILLIE TEE: Anticipation, United Artists (UA LA 655-G 0698).

Willie Tee, the reclusive, will-o'-thewisp young master of New Orleans rhythm and hlues, has released his first new album in more than five years. After a hizarre career that included a 1965 soul hit ("Teasin' You"), a jazzpop album recorded under the vision of the late Cannonball Adderley vision of the late Camonoali Adderley and a plunge into Afro-jazz-voodoo-hink with the Wild Magnollas, Mr. Tee's "Anticipation" sounds almost tame. It is only with difficulty that one recalls how strange his fusion of soul and jazz elements sounded 10 years ago, but what has happened is that Mr. Tee's originally visionary impulses have been vindicated by the passing of time.

In fact, the broiling, jazz-inflected funk Mr. Tee serves up on "Anticipation" now fits comfortably into the black music mainstream. At bottom, though, it is still an idiosyncratic New Orleans product, from the lopsided polyrhythms of Mr. Tee's fine band, the

WOODY SHAW: Love Dance, Muse (MR 5074).

Amplified rock-influenced "crossover music dominates jazz record sales these days, while critical attention is often focused on the young musicians of the avant-garde. But some young musicians are still working in the jazz idiom of the 1940's and 50's, and one of the best of them is a trumpeter in his early 30's named Woody

Mr. Shaw is not an archivist. His influences include Eric Dolphy and John Coltrane, two of the more advanced musicians of the 1960's. But he chooses to work out his ideas in the context of popular-song forms, and the choice is a wise one. Mr. Shaw is hlessed with an exceptionally lyrical and inventive imagination and a sophisticated harmonic intelligence, which would be largely wasted in a more avant-garde context. He is also a very personal player, whose big but slightly bitter-sweet sound is ministakable.

"Love Dance," Mr. Shaw's second album for Muse, is a very nearly ideal showcase for his talents. The assisting musicians are excellent, especially the teoor saxophonist Billy Harper, and the compositions, voiced in bright, ringing harmony for four horns and a five-man rhythm section, are substantial. The album's fault is that Mr. Shaw does not fcature his own playing enough. It is to be hoped he will record soon with a smaller group and give an even bet-ter indication of his abilities.

GOING OUT

MINIMENE Midtown office workers and theatergoers in general will welcome back the lunchtime entertainment showcased by the Quaigh Theater in this season's series of 15 one act plays, most of them new, starting today. "Tatami," a drama by David Shapiro influenced by Japan's Kabuki Theater, can be seen at 12:15 P.M. Mondays through Fridays for two weeks. The new Quaigh locale is the renovated mezzanine floor of the Hotel Diplomat (opposite Town Hall) at 108 West 43d Street Door admission is $1.50.

The noontime showcase has had enthusiastic response in previous seasons, as with the revival of Eugene O'Neill'a sea plays. Patrons are urged to bring lunch and enjoy the informal atmosphere during the shows. Writing in The New York Times, Mel Gussow called the early-afternoon stagings "a meaty way to spend one's hunch hour."

The Quaigh troupe has also drawn acelaim for its evening presentations such as "Street Scene" and "The Climate of Eden." Marvin Retzke's new comedy, "The Last Resort," runs from tomorrow through Jan. 9, with tickets at $2.50 and a 7:30 P.M. curtain. Reservations: 787-0862.

The other night, Mr. Hughes was doing nicely by "Send in the Clowns" for a nearby group, the music suiting his black-tie garb and a vase of yellow roses on the piano lid. Asked for another favorite, he went into a cheerfully jazzy version of "As Time Goes By," balancing that with two numbers from "A Chorus Line," torchy and rliythmic. Then came the wistful ballad. "When You Come Home Once

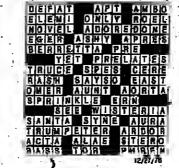

There's one catch to finding the easily accessible Bijou, two doors east of First Avenue at 400 East 57th Street. The lettering on the gray entrance can-opy is artfully obscure, and from First Avenue, the canopy itself is obscured by the adjacent, tan one of an apartment building. But the Bijou and Mr. Hughes's music are worth a hit of squinting.

IV: No 'Nutcracker'? Try 'Ballet Shoes'

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR

Nothing can fully compensate for absence of Balanchine's "The Nutcacker" from the stage of Lincoln enter's State Theater this holiday tason, but public televisioo has imorted a dramatization of "Ballet noes" that provides a temporary subitute of pronounced charm. The story, et in England of 1935, is a children's vorite written by a formidable womn named Noel Streetfeild.

In an interview connected with this V adaptation, Miss Streatfelld, having ached her 80's, stressed that she had een the unruly child of a very proper icar. "It was never easy being part f a saint's family," she recalled, adding My mother said she'd rather do any-ing than bring me up twice."

This distinctive tooe of no-nonsense ister is probably what saves "Ballet hoes" from tumbling into sugary epths. The story cleverly dangles the ossibility of fame and fortune for etermined little girls, but the general etting of genteel poverty and hard rork establishes a firm link between entasy and reality.

Pauline, Petrova and Posy are or-hans from different family hack-rounds. They have been adopted hy in eccentric archeologist who, in his lassionate international search for as-orted specimens, has not heen heard if for 10 years. In honor of their urious benefactor, the girls have aken the surname Fossil. Their com-ortable middle class home, fast head-ng toward financial ruin is overseen. ng toward financial ruin, is overseen ng toward financial ruin, is overseen doubtable Doctor Jakes, a professor of literature, uses her knowledge to direct the stage-struck Pauline. John Simpson, who opens a garage, becomes a hero to Petrova, who is fascinated with mechanical contraptions. And Theo Dane, teacher at a performing-arts school, introduces Posy to the

The girls are hardly flawless. Pauline is aiready showing symptoms of actor egomanis. Petrova, longing for her machines, constantly underestimates herself in artistic pursuits. And Posy, totally preoccupied with dance, has retreated to a world of her own. In other words, they are very human and very recognizable. "We three Fossi's vow," they solemnly swear, "to become fa-mons and put our names in the history

Enter Madame Fidolia, owner of the school where Theo teaches. As played with turbaned and bejeweled intensity by Mary Morris, Madame is a marvelous creation, looking a little like Marting Graham and sounding a little Martha Graham and sounding a little like Alexandra Danilova. Madame is the high priest of art. Vot (pause) ees (pause) docinh?, she asks the fascinated girls. It is, of coerse discipline and pride. "We sweat, we strain, but always we smile," Madame warns. "You have to nail yourself to your art," she says, "we always hide our agony, we never show it." It's obvious that, underneath her glutious agony, Madame is a dollink.

She gives Pauline and Petrova the leads of Tyltyl and Myltyl in "The Blue Bird." which is being produced at Sadler's Wells as a hospital benefit. She gets the girls into a professional production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Meanwhile, the financial fortunes of the family are deteriorating tunes of the family are deteriorating rapidly. The house may have to be sold. Posy may never get the training io Russia that she needs to realize her full dancing potential. And so the perils of Pauline, Petrova and Posy mount, with all of the skillful maneuvering that has made "Ballet Shoes" a modern classic.

With John Wiles as writer and John McRae as producer, this TV adaptation was originally presented as six 25-minute episodes. Public TV has arranged the material into two parts. The first can be seen tonight at 8, the second tomorrow at 8. Outstanding among the production's assets are the among the production's assets are the roles of the three girls as performed by pupils of the Elmhurst Ballet School making their TV debuts. Pauline is played by 13-year-old Elizabeth Morgan, Petrova by Jane Slaughter, also 13, and Posy by Sarah Prince, 12. Miss Streatfelld should be pleased.

The play will be directed by Arthur Allan Seidelman and produced by seorge R. Nice and Golden Eagle Pro-Inctions. A short out-of-town tour will recede the New York premiere.

Mr. Seidelman has staged other Williams plays outside New York, among them revivals of 'The Glass Menagerie," with Sylvia Sidney and Jill Haworth, and "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof." 2 New York, he directed the American Place Theater production of Ronald Ribman's "Ceremony of Innocence," with Donald Madden and Sandy Duncan, and a revival of Clifford Odets's "Awake and Sing," with Josa Lorring and Bill Macy.

Historical Portraits At Louisiana Museum

By way of winding up the Bicenten-nial year, the Louisiana State Museum in New Orleans has mounted a show of work by George Peter Alexander Healy (1813-1894), one of the 19th century's most prolific portrait painters.

In a career spanning 60 years, Healy traveled across America and commuted to Europe, painting some of the world's most prominent citizens, among them Louis Philippe, King of France, Pope Pius DK, Prince Charles of Rumania, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Henry Clay and a series of American Presi-

Self-taoght as a young man, Healy was encouraged by the noted American portraitist Thomas Suby, and later studied in Paris with the French painter Baron Jean-Antoine Gros. During a 16year period at the peak of his career, he is known to have painted 500 porof both the likeness and the persooslity of the sitter. He was also noted for his experiments in lighting his subject and for his coloring, particular of complexions. Amoog Healy's clients were many Louisianians, a number of whom are included in the New Orleans exhibition. Also shown are works by Sully and Samuel F. B. Morse, whom Head, admired, and several by bis younger hrother, Thomas C. Healy, also a well-known portraitist.

Bruce Dern Is Signed For 'Coming Home'

Bruce Dern, who has been featured in such films as "The Great Gatsby" and "Family Plot," has been signed to and "Family Plot," has been signed to co-star with Jane Fonda and Jon Voight in "Coming Home." The drama, described by the producer, Jerome Hellman, as a "realistic love story," involves two Vietnam veterans, with Mr. Dern playing Miss Fonda's husbaod and Mr. Voight portraying a paraplegic.

Hal Ashby, who has been successful with a variety of films, including the current "Bound for Glory," will direct for United Artists from a script by Waldo Salt based on an idea by Miss Fonds and Bruce Gilbert. Shooting of "Coming Home," which is set in Cali-fornia during the 1960's, is to start on location there on Jan. 3.

'Dog Soldiers' Film. To Star Nick Nolte

The war in Vietnam will provide the background for another new film. Dog Soldiers," adapted by Robert Stone and Judith Ruscoe from Mr. Stone's novel, which won a National Book Award last year. Nick Nolte, who had gained considerable attention in the television series "Rich Man, Poor Man," will star in "Dog Soldiers" as a Vietnam veteran who becomes involved with the selling

The film will be directed by Karel Reisz and produced by Herb Jaffe and Gabe Katzka for United Artists.

Wall Street Is Bullish on '7

By VARTANIG G. VARTAN

The stock market is winding up 1976 in seemingly good shape. Both interest rates and the inflation rate are running at their lowest levels in several years. The lagging economy shows signs of revival. And President-elect Carter is standing in the wings to provide any needed stimulus.

Wall Street, meanwhile, is engaged in its annual situal of charting the winners and, one hopes, avoiding the losers of the new year.

As a starter, most analysts and portfolio managers are basically bullish about prospects for 1977. At this point, they generally expect the market to perform better in the first half of next year than in the second half. And many observers—just as they forecast a year ago—expect the Dow Jones industrial average to soar above its record closing high of 1,051.70 on Jan. 11, 1973, some time during the next few months. So what are the favorite groups for

Holiday Shopping Season Ends in a Strong Flurry

Sales Up 6.5% From 1975 in 10 Big Cities -Buyers Hesitant After a Strong Start

By ISADORE BARMASH

The year's Christmas shopping season, which softened after a vigorous start, concluded with a strong flurry that spelled a vital difference to many retailers across the nation and gave a smaller number of double-digit gains over 1975.

Sales advances of 4 percent to 10 percent over last year were rung up, with an average approximating 6.5 percent, according to a telephone spotcheck of 10 major cities.

But in most cases the shopping public remained hesitant and tended to delay buying virtually to the end of the 29-day season. "Those last two days were crubicial," said Robert T. Sakowitz, president of Sakowitz Inc., Houston-based chain of six specialty stores. Almost every mer-chant agreed that the season's results, while ahead of last year and mostly ahead of the 4.5 percent inflation rate in general merchandise, failed to reflect the solid consumer confidence that gave Christmas 1975 its hig 15 percent and 18 percent gains over 1974 for apparel and department stores, respectively. department stores, respectively.

Concern over inflation on basic goods and services, employment opportunities, and over portended changes in the national economy generally kept consumers from being more enthusiastic shoppers, retailers said.

The gains for the just-completed season may even be less than they appear. More Shopping Days

The 1976 holiday period included two additional shopping days over last year, 29 to 27, while a large number of major stores opened their doors on Sundays for the first time for pre-Christmas selling, especially in the Middle Atlantic and Northeastern states. This meant that many stores had the two extra days and as many as four 5 undays since Thanks-giving Day, when the season began, in which to equal and exceed last year's

Yet, the results varied by city and region, reflecting at least tn a certain extent the local economy. In New York most stores had gains of 5 to 10 percent over lest year, but the average gain was ex-pected to be under the 8 percent increase in the city last December over 1974.

Saks Fifth Avenue, the nation's larges fashion specialty chain had a sales rise in the season "well above the inflation rate" in New York but a double-digit gain in other cities where it has stores, accord-ing to Allan Johnson, chairman.

"The two 5unday openings in New York helped," he said a but since a week ago last Thursday we bad record days practi-cally without exception." And despite evident "value consciousness by consum-ers," be added, expensive merchandise, such as men's furnishings and women's handbags, sold well.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26-In an event without precedent in the 30-year history of the World Bank, the just-retired United States executive director addressed a packed meeting of staff members early this month and expressed United States Government reservations about the direction the bank is taking.

Mr. Cooper confirmed in an interview that he had addressed the staff. While declining to talk for the record, he did not dispute the accounts of what he had

The fundamental issue raised by Mr. Cooper was the rapid rate of growth of the bank's lending to the less developed countries under Mr. McNamara. He asked whether it made sense to view the bank's achievements in quantitative terms when its contribution to the vast task of economic development would under any cir-cumstances he relatively small and when its key influence has always been on the quality of projects and on local govern-ment policies rather than the amount of noney loaned.

Production of China's Oiltield AtTaching May Have Peaked

Region That Made Peking Self-Sufficient in 1960's Appears to Be on Verge of Rapid Decline -

By ROSS H. MUNRO

TACHING, China-As recently as the autumn of 1975, China was being trumpeted as a new Saudi Arabia that would soon be exporting countless tankers of oil to an energy-starved world.

This year, however, the growth rate in China's oil production has abruptly slowed to 10 percent, about half the average for the last decade. That is is still a very healthy growth rate, but not enough to fuel any export boom.

In fact, it doesn't do much more than meet China's own burgeoming domestic

The best explanation for the export boom that oever was may lie right bere in China's richest and best known oil field. Taching, the stuff of which Communist legends are made, was the field that made China self-sufficient in oil in the 1960's and smashed the conven-tional wisdom that China would never produce large quantities of oil.

But now, 17 years after its discovery, production et Taching appears to have peaked and may in fact be on the verge of a rapid decrease. This is sobering news for China's planners because year after year it has been the Taching field almost by itself which has generated Chioa's big annual production in-

Exports to Japan Down

China has promising new fieldsboth onsbore and offshore-in its central east coast region, but these are apparently proving to be more costly in terms of time, money and technology to be brought into full production. So production trends at Taching are still the crucial component in China's oli

The squeeze has already shown up in the reduction of Chinese oil exports this year to Japan; the latest estimate is that China's biggest overseas oil cus-tomer will buy about six million metric tons of oil or at least 25 percent less

Forecasts that China would be exporting 50 million to 100 million metric tons of oil a year by 1980 now are completely invalid and the estimate of 27 million to 33 million metric tons published recently by the Central Intelligeoce Agency, an estimate ooce con-sidered very conservative, oow must be considered a top-end estimate. In short, it is not reasonable any more to look to China as a mejor oil exporter during the rest of this decade and the early 1980's.

Estimating Taching's production trends, it must be cooceded, is a tricky business. An official spokesman insisted in discussions with visiting foreign correspondents this month that production at the field is continuing to increase. But he refused to divulge any hard, overall production statistics, while the partial statistics he did reveal —along with what was learned during four days touring the field—alf indicat-ed that it is on the verge of a major

If ooe combines the simple, percentage increases in production that the official disclosed with similar statistics released in previous years by the Chi-nese and then matches up these figures against the careful estimates by United States experts of Taching's productioo, one must cooclude that sometime in the last 12 months the field's production peaked at an annual rate of 23 million to 25 million metric tons of

Drilling Appears Halted

That is the big, and abstract, picture. But a oumber of concrete things seen on the tour—and other things that were not seen—all add up to the story of s field that has already seen its best. days. When an oil expert was asked about the significance of what had been seen, be said it all pointed in the direction of a field that was on the verge of a marked decline in prodoction. verge of a marked decline in prodoction.

Drilling of new wells as well as exploratory drilling at the fringes of the Taching field appears to have completely haited. Although foreign visitors were regularly taken to see drilling operations until the beginning of this year, repeated requests to visit a drilling site were rebuffed. Altogether, about five different explanations were offered why a visit was impossible and offered why a visit was impossible and why no drilling was currently pro-gramed for next year, but he was un-

Chinese said. There were also a number of apparently newly installed "strip-per" wells that are installed when an oil reservoir has been substantially exploited and the remainder of the oil must be brought up in small quantities over a long period of time.

The particular off wells and collection the particular oil wells and collection stations that have been specially select-ed for foreigners to visit have increased their production, at least up until this year, according to the Chinese officials who give briefings to visiting foreign-ers. Bot at one collection station, there was a graph that showed that produc-tion increases during the last two years had been achieved only by tripling the amount of water injected into the

At other wells and collection stations, the same pattern emerged; water injection has increased markedly during the last year or two and there is now more water being put into the ground than there is oil being taken out of the ground.

Water injection has long been a feature of the Taching field; it is a well-established method of increasing underground pressures and forcing out the oil. However, the recent, large in-creases in the volumes of water being injected into the ground suggests that major production problems have al-ready developed. It is a matter of rapidiy diminishing returns: more and more water and less and less oil is pumped to the surface and the oil that does emerge is in danger of being emulsified in water to the extent that it cannot be recovered economically.

Even the dismal housing indicates that Taching has a limited life span. The vast majority of the 500,000 people who live in the field—only 60,000 of them actually working in the oil industry—are still living in the crumbling much houses that were hastly built by the first ware of workers in the early the first wave of workers in the early 1960's. The small amount of new housing being constructed suggests that the authorities expect the population will decrease as workers move on to more promising fields.

But any realistic investor must ask himself whether the company can con-tinue to grow at the present rapid olip. He must consider the fact that McDonald's own stores and those of ranchisees are now racking up sales of around $3 billion a year. There are more than 3,853 McDonald's restaurants in the United States and Canada.

In a major report, Victor J. Raskin, vice president of Dean Witter & Com-pany, has analyzed general data on the European market prepared by Gordon International Research Associates, a Geneva-based food service consultant. Mr. Raskin has applied the results to McDonald's prospects after further contact with the company itself and a trip to Europe.

Mr. Raskin finds several factors favoring growth for McDonald's in Europe. He notes that Europeans no longer have time to go home for kinch, since the period has been shortened in most cases to 45 minutes or an hour.

What's more more wives are workmost cases to 45 minutes or an hour.

What's more, more wives are working, and the young, who have been important to McDonald's here, are willing to break with European eating traditions, Mr. Raskin says.

"In our opinion," he says, "a large fast-food market potential exists in West Germany, the United Kingdom, and France in that order."

"Chain penetration of total food-and-drink sales in Europe was 2.9 percent in 1974 and is estimated to increase to 5.6 percent by 1980," he says. For food only, he adds, the figures are 8.1 percent and 10.9 percent, respectively. The United States figures show total chain penetration in 1974 at 32.9 percent; 39.4 percent is estimated for 1980.

"Thus one could believe that I

Companies Seeking Business in Eastern Europe Must Face Years of Negotiations With Bureaucrats

By PAUL HOFMANN

VIENNA-Every working day some American gets in touch with the Uoited States Embassy here to ask what the prospects are for doing business in Eastern Europe.

Some of the callers are oldtimers who just want to compare notes with the East-West trade information service of the embassy. Others are newcomers who would like to make money in the Soviet bloc but do not know how to go about it.

Embassy officials and private experts sod consultants tell the would-be operators in East-West exchanges that they must be prepared—and have the resources — to conduct negotiations with Communist bureaucrats for years.

This usually requires oumerous visits to forbidding-looking official buildings in Warsaw, Prague, Bucharest and other Communist capitals. Once inside, the Western businessman will need infinite patience. In return be will be offered, if oothing else, innumerable cups of coffee and glasses of vodka, barack, slivovitz or some other brandy. A Query About Southeastern Europe

Sweet Smell of Success on TV

BY PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

If there was any product category that seemed to dominate television advertising in the pre-Christmas season it was fragrances. The tube fairly recked with the stuff.

"The industry is awake to TV and is using it like it does the fashion magazines," said Martin Landey, chairman of Martin Landey, Arlow Adver-tising the agency for Coty.

Those familiar and unfamiliar, frequently French, product names have been wafting over the airwaves since-before Thanksgiving bringing promises of romance, inner peace or morale im-provement. And, despite the terrible clutter of messages and the difficulty of buying commercial time and its cost, the advertisers seem truly committed to the medium.

"Business is going through the roof," said a marketing man at Estee. Lauder, which is using TV in New York for the first time in a co-op program with major retailers.

Last year was a tremendous one for the $950 million fragrance industry, and from all, ascounts this year has tomad it handliv.

If any trend can be detected in the advertising it would be one away from the woman-as-sex-object genre. For ex-ample Coty's new Masumi seems directed at the Yoga generation: The Masumi Experience. You breathe Ma-sumi. You touch Masumi, Masumi touches you Tranquil. Serene. As Ma-sumi lingers your isner beauty emerges. You feel renewed. Experience Masumi."

Beautiful, But what does it all mean? Revion's successful Charlie is aimed at the girl who knows her own mind and knows her own way, according to Sanford Buchsbaum, senior vice presi-dent-advertising, while Babe, the Faberge entry, positions itself for the fresh, active, involved woman, "a regular guy that hasn't lost her feminity."

Fragrance advertisers, according to Mr. Landey, "are going to have to have a positioning difference to get through the clutter and get trial."

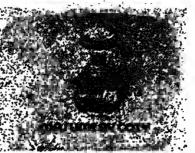

Dana, whose agency is DKG, has introduced 20 Carats for the woman who wants to "smell rich and look rich. ...

The creative approach to a fragrance assignment has got to be a major challenge. After all, what can you really say outside of "It smells good?" Well, you can always say something: that doesn't say anything but creates an aura.

Rive Gauche says, "It's lively, warm and very French." White Jean Nate says, "Jean Nate, it's like that." Both are from Lanvin-Charles of the Ritz with advertising by Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample.

A check with WNBC-TV, Channel 4. shows that 13 fragrance companies (several with multiple brands) are using that local station, while the NBC television network lists eight advertis-ers. A few use TV year round, but most save it for the wonderful gift-giving time of the year, beginning their push in November. Mr. Landey says he hopes to get Coty to begin a month earlier

The tight situation involving adver-tising time on TV in the fourth quarter has been well publicized, but the people interviewed in the fragrance business said they were able to buy all they needed, although not always at the desired times and certainly not at the desired price. Revion, anticipating a seller's marker, made its buy last spring.

Getting back to Estee Lander for s moment, that company has been mov-ing into television on a market-by-market besis and is in about 30 now it has saved New York—the hig one till now.

AC&R, a subsidiary of Ted Bates & Company, has done its advertising, which offers a creative make-up kit collection said to be worth $50 to anyone buying one of Lauder's fragrances-Youth Dew. Estee, Aliage, Azurée and Private Collection. At least five stores are using the spots, according to WNEW-IV. Channel 5. Men's fragrances? Well, that's a

Korean Ginseng, which has. been reverently used by the Orientals for over 5,000 years. for its revitalizing and restorative powers, is today enjoying increasing popularity all over the world as a recognized health food and prized medicinal herb surpassing all other time-tested ones. This year, Korean exports of Ginseng and its products totalled more than $52 million to 47 countries.

At the International Ginseng Symposium held in Seoul, Korea, in September, 1974 and the International Symposium on Gerontology held in Lugano, Switzerland, in May, 1975, scholars from 7 countries showed detailed proof of the effect Korean Ginseng has on human health.

Its enthusiasts consider it "The Panacea of All Ailments". The sick take it to help recover their health, while the healthy use it to make themselves rejuvenated and stronger in body

The Office of Monopoly, a central Government organization of the Republic of Korea, does its best to ensure top quality Korean Ginseng export products by strict control and supervision of all phases of production, from cultivation to merchandising.

Korean Red Ginseng stands for Top Quality Ginseng

Every Ginseng garden in Korea is subject to registeration under the pertinent law. No application of chemical or other artificial fertilizer is allowed. Same garden is not permitted to be cultivated again for 15 years after its previous cultivation. Government officials are especially appointed to see and guide the cultivation of Korean Ginseng that requires a more than six years of ceaseless attention. Superior quality Ginseng roots are carefully selected from the entire crop of 6-year-old Ginseng roots and then processed under the strict quality control system of the Office of Monopoly. The Korean Red Ginseng monopolized by the Government can be exported only by Government appointed

Korean Red Ginseng has been favored as the most precious panaces among the royal families of the Oriental countries from ancient time, but has now become a favorite instant health food easy to take in Europe and the United States in particular.

When only a little more than half the eligible voters go to the polls to select a President of the United States, the country worries about the vitality of its domocratic processes. In the comparative bandful of Americao unions that choose their top officers by referendum, a 50 percent turnout isconsidered heavy even in a fiercely contested election.

The latest evidence of slack rankand-file participation in union votes was provided by last week's final count in voting at the International Union of Electrical Workers, the union that rep-resents workers at General Electric, Westinghouse and other major electrical manufacturers. Fewer than a third of the 254,000 members declared eligible by Department of Labor moni-tors bothered to vote, even though ballots were sent to their homes and follow-up checks were made to plug holes in the delivery list.

The vote resulted in a victory for David J. Fitzmaurice, who had moved up from secretary-treasurer to president last June after ill health had forced the resignation of Paul Jennings from the top spot. Mr. Fitzmaurice won a four-year term in his own right by a marrin of 42,957 to 34,461 over William Bywater. New York-New Jersey district president, running as an advo-cate of more activist union leadership.

"I am gratified that, where I was appointed like Jerry Ford. I made it and he didn't," said Mr. Fitzmaurice after the tally, "But I am troubled by the apathy. I like the idea of inpot from the rank and file, but I have seri-ous doubts about the high cost of campaigning and the way the husiness of the union grinds to a halt during the two or three months from nominations

He estimated that his own campaign had cost $100,000 on top of the $400,000 expense to the union itself. He added that it was "no fun to beg," even though he felt confident be had avoided any entangling alliances in appealing to well-wishers inside and out-

His defeated opconent, Mr. Bywater, said he would decide this week whether to challenge the outcome on the hasis of alleged irregularities involving the mail list. However, he emphasized his own continued support for the direct election system.

When the international executive board builds its first post-election meeting Jan. 10. Mr. Fitzmaurice will recommend that it consider a change in future election practice. "I am reluctant to go to the method most unions use of letting conventions name the officers, but we might be able to work out a more representative way of choosing convention delegates," he

"I am not ready to give up on letting the members make the choice," Mr. By-water said, "We ought to try to make the system work better rather than scuttle it."

The slim turnout in the electrical union took on special interest inasmuch

Through the four decades of John Through the four decades of John L. Lewis's domination, the mine union was run as a dictatorship, with the elections a no-choice formality. However, that situation changed with his death and the emergence of a rank-and-file movement that took over in 1972 after the murder of the chief insurgent, Joseph A. Yablonski.

The new leadership, installed by a vote of 70,373 to 56,334, with 81 percent of the members participating, has brought the union to a state of nearanarchy. Another election will be held this June, with a strong chance that relics of the old machine will return

In the typographical union, democracy has had a smoother course. In the biennial election last May, after years of uninterrupted control by the socalled Progressive Party, an independent, Thomas W. Kopeck, secretary-treasurer of New York Typographical Union No. 6, was elected secretary-treasurer of the parent union. The Pro-gressiva incumbent, A. Sandy Bevis, retained the presidency. Minety percent of the members vote in every election, a record the union sustains by taking secret ballots right in the work place.

"The workers don't even have to go cross the street," said Mr. Kopeck. Pensioners who now make up nearly 30 percent of those eligible to vote in the technologically shrunk printers union cast their ballots by mail.

The country's outstanding academic expert on union elections, Prof. Clyde W. Summers of the University of Pennsylvania Law School, applauds the direct-voting approach as infinitely more democratic than choice of union officers by convention.

"It may be expensive, troublesome and burdensome to have a union referendum, but where there are member-ship dissatisfactions, the vote gives the rank and file an opportunity, to ventilate them in a way no convention ever does," Professor Summers said.

The gross national product—market value of all goods and services produced by a nation—increased in 1975 for almost every country, even the poorest. But when those increases in G.N.P. were adjusted to take into account a continuing high level of price increases, the gains shrank to zero for most countries and were transformed into actual declines in the standard of living for many others. The United States remained the world's biggest economy by a wide margin, with a G.N.P. of more than $1.5 trillion. It was followed by the Soviet Union, $665.9 billion; Japan, $495.2 billion; West Germany $408.8 billion, and France $304.6 billion.

Government Agricultural Policy

By H. J. MAIDENBERG

If there is any subject more vital to futures traders in farm commodities than the global weather outlook, it is Government agricultural policy.

Thus President-elect Carter's nomi-nation of Representative Bob S. Bergland, a Minnesota wheat and grass-seed grower, to be his Secretary of Agriculture easily dominated the conversation of Midwest commodity traders last week.

Not only was trading dull during the four pre-holiday sessions, but also in-terest centered on the fact Representative Bergland has been an outspoken advocate of higher crop support prices, grain reserves and increased food aid to the poor. However, a number of commodity specialists are quietly cautioning both hedgers and speculators about paying to much heed to Representative Bergland's past views.

"For one, such policies may carry price tags that Mr. Carter and urban taxpayers may not care to assume," an important Chicago grain broker ob-served last Friday, adding: "And I'm telling my clients that the new Administration will have to live with the 1973 Farm Act that will not expire until after all the 1977 grain, soybean, cotton and tobacco crops are harvested." Essentially, the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, as the law is officially termed, is aimed at raising farm output because it was written in the hope of cooling inflationary fires sparked by the massive Soviet grain purchases in 1972. The 1973 Farm Act was considered radical at the time because it reversed decades of previous Washington moves to curb output as a means of eliminating the costly and burdensome farm surpluses that persisted before 1972.

As Assistant Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Bell observed resulting the current farm law was also radical in that it created a target price concept for major crop commodities as a basis for Federal support of farmers, rather than the older complicated system of parity prices based on 1910-14 conditions.

'Nobody has paid much notice to the 1973 Farm Act," a New York grain broker said, "because until now market prices made the target levels academic. Now that prices are falling and Berg-land is heading to the policy controls, traders better take a look at the law."

Target Set in Washington Basically, the target prices are set each year by Washington on key crops. Should market prices fall below these levels, then the Government pays the farmer the difference between the market pay the target that the prices to a limit ket and the target prices, to a limit of $20,000 a farmer each year.

No such payments have been made under the current Farm Act inasmuch as market prices have been above tar-yet levels since the law was signed. For example, the target price for wheat is expected to rise to $2.58 a bushel from $2.03 next February, when levels are revised, Mr. Bell said recently, and that for cora will ge $1.74 a bushel from today's $1.57. Raiders Trounce Injury-Ridden Steelers by 24-7 And Reach Super Bowl With Vikings, 24-13 Victors

Rams Are Beaten-Blocked Field-Goal Attempt Key Play

By DAVE ANDERSON special to The New York Tunes

BLOOMINGTON, Minn., Dec. 26 -For the third time in four years, the Minnesota Vikings qualified today for the Super Bowl, a game they have lost a record three times, with a 24-13 victory over the Los Angeles Rams on a blocked field-goal attempt, a blocked punt, Fran Tarkenton's guile and Chuck Foreman's speed.

As the National Conference cham-pions, the Vikings will oppose the Oak-land Raiders in the Super Bowl at Pasadena, Calif., on Jan. 9.

In retrospect, the Vikings' fourth victory in four conference title games turned on a Rams' decision late in the scoreless first quarter. Stopped within a foot of the Minnesota goal line on Pat Haden's quarterback sneak on third down, the Rams chose to try for a 17-yard field goal by Tom Demp-

Nate Allen, sweeping in from the right side, blocked the kick. The ball bounced to Bobby Bryant, who ran 90 yards for a touchdown as Allen cut down the last Ram tackler, Steve Preece, who had been the ball-bolder, at the 20-yard line. Suddenly, the Vikings had a 7-0 lead.

"It took us a while," Chuck Knox, the Rams' coach, said later, "to get over the shock."

Foreman on 62-Yard Janut Les time the Rams did get over the shock, they trailed 17-0, on Fred Cox's 25-yard field goal following Matt Blair's block of a Rusty Jackson punt and Foreman's 1-yard smash after be had notified his toysthown with a bad positioned his touchdown with a 62-yard gallop to the Rams' 2-yard line.

The collaboration of Allen and Bryant delighted the parka-clad crowd of 47,-191 at Metropolitan Stadium and depressed the Rams.

"The snap was high, above the bold-er's bead," Dempsey said of Rich Soul's snap. "That split second made a blg

But what disturbed the Rams in their third consecutive cooference title de-feat was their belief that Roo Jessie, a wide receiver, had scored on a sec ond-down end-round run and that. Hadeo bad scored on the quarterback sneak prior to Dempsey's aborted fieldgoal attempt.

"We find," grumbled Carroll Rosen-bloom, the Rams owner, "that big games are decided by officials" calls: On the replay it looked as if Roo was in, and if he's in, it's a whole different ballgame. They told me Haden was in. Jessie "thought I was in by a lot"

The Vikings were grateful. Asked later if be considered Haden's inability to score on third down as the big play. Tarkenton said, "I thought the decision to go for the field goal was the big play." And as it turned out, with Bryant scoring, it was the big play.

There were other big plays later, the Rams producing two quick toochdowns to narrow the Vikings' lead to 17-13 late in the third quarter. But in the final minutes the Vikings made two big plays that assured their victory. Haden, the pseudo-rookie from Oxford and the World Football League, collaborated with Harold Jackson on a 40-yard pass play that preceded Law-rence McCutcheon's 10-yard touch-

Nate Allen Calls It Luck

BLOOMINGTON, Minn., Dec. 26—The Minnesota Vikings, the only team in the history of professional football to lose three Super Bowl games, now have a chance to make it four for a record that could stand for years and years. They earned the opportunity this arctic afternoon in a most ingenious manner. When their match with the Los Angeles Rams was over, they had been beaten at making first downs, 21 to 13; they trailed in net yards gained, 336 to 267; they had controlled the ball long enough to run 60 plays, compared with the Rams' 71; they led on the scoreboard, 24-13, and that margin gave them the championship of the National Foothall League's National Conference. The Times Their defensive unit did the job with the play that distinguished this truculent troupe all season—the blocked kick.

When their second game of the year, their first with the Rams, went into overtime, Nate Alien, the cornerback, blocked Tom Dempsey's field goal attempt and preserved

The next Sunday Allen blocked a conversion kick by Detroit, and Minnesota best the Lions, 10-9. Then Matt Blair, a linebacker, blocked Chicago's attempt for an extra point in a 20-19 victory over the Bears. Against the New York Giants, Allen ran a blocked punt 28 yards for the first touchdown as the Vikings romped, 24-7.

Holding a Crazy Man Down

Minnesota had blocked 13 kicks coming into today's entertainment, and on the Rams' very first punt Allen was only a breath away from the 14th. He got it on the very oext Los Angeles kick, a field-goal attempt by Dempsey from Minoesota's 7-yard line. Bobby Bryant, the other cornerback, fielded the ball and was gone for 90 yards and a touchdown. Then Blair blocked a punt on the Los Angeles 10, setting up a field goal. And finally, with 2 minutes 28 seconds to play and the Rams threstening a Minnesota lead of 17-13, Bryant intercepted a pass by Pat Haden on the Vikings' 8.

How do these Norsemen bring off these defensive master

"It's luck," Nate Allen said. "It comes from working every day. If it takes guts to stick your face in front of a kick, well these guys have shown character ever since I've been here." (The Vikings got Allen just before the season opened in a trade with San Francisco.)

"It takes 10 men to hold a crazy man down," Allen said, "and I'm the crazy man. I'm the one supposed to go in there. I try to watch how the wingback is blocking, and if that doesn't work I study the center. On the field goal, I got a good start, and the holder was a little slow putting the ball down. I blocked it with my chest, it hounced right, and Bobby picked it up in stride."

"I glanced over my shoulder when I fielded the ball," Bryant said, "and I knew nothing would stop me unless I stumbled or they put a jet in there. I just took off, but was getting a little tight at the end."

Steve Preece was the only pursuer who got anywhere near Bryant, and we was flattend by Allen.

Blair Was Held

While the winners told how they did it, Minnesota's Senator Hubert Humphrey moved through the room pumping hands. For a man recently operated on for cancer in the bladder, he looked great. "I've become a dressing-room freak," he said, explaining his presence.

"Ninty-yard runs are fine," a man was saying to Bryant, "but tell us about the pass interception. That may have

"I presume you mean that last one," Bryant said. "Both wide receivers came down the middle, and my man, Harold Jackson, came down the middle, too. I saw the ball thrown and was able to get to it."

"We weren't supposed to block the kick," Blair said about the punt he swatted off Rusty Jackson's toes. "We were playing for a punt return, and I was supposed to hit and come back. But if you've got football instinct, sometimes you get the feeling, 'I'd better go in.' I decided to give it a shot.

"I was held in the line, but luckily Jackson dropped the ball, and that gave me time to break loose. The ball hit the ground, and he picked it up and kicked, but by then

The Raiders won a big one today, trouncing the Pittsburgh Steelers, 24-7, in a cootest that was never very competitive with the American Football Conference championship and Super Bowl qualification the prizes.

The Vikings will go into their fourth Super Bowl, this one to be played at Pasadena, Calif., on Jan. 9, oezer having won the ultimate game of pro foot-ball, and the Raiders will be in their second, also without a prior triumph. It took the Raiders almost a decade to reach the Super Bowl again but they manbandled Pittsburgh.

'We didn't want any-thing to get out of hand," said Mark Van Eegheo, the Oakland fullback and leading rusher with 66 yards. "We were helping them up. They were helping us up."

Lou Hudson and Tom Henderson, At-lanta's bockcourt pair, burned New York's guards for 22 and 25 points, respectively, ond were the main reason that the Hawks held a 12-point lead at 77-65 with a minute and a half left in the third quarter.

The Knicks stayed in contention only because Lonnie Shelton and Tom Mc-Millen helped fill the gap left by Hay-wood and McAdoo. Shelton scored 23 points, grabbed 11 rebounds and blocked four sbots. McMillen, who is more and more dispelling the notion that he was a "throw-io" in the trade for McAdoo with Buffalo, tallied 20 points and pulled down 10 rebounds.

And Bill Bradley, healthy for olmost the first time this season, hit eight of 10 shots while scoring 20 points in 31 minutes. His basket from the top of the key off a feed by Monroe gave the Knicks the lead for good at 93-91 with 3:02 to play and were the only points produced by a Knick other than The Pearl in the last five minutes.

Monroe had drawn a technical foul Coach Hubie Brown and Tom Barker of Atlanta. He ranted at he referees and at several Knick teammates who tried to cool bim off. "Officials seem to have a book' on "Officials seem to have a book on how to make calls on certain players" he said after the game. "I could get hurt out there if they don't make certain calls. The Knicks won't pay me my salary if I can't play. Something like that could conceivably and my whole livelibood."

The Name of TThis Game

"I knew what I was doing out there and I don't need anybody to tell me," he said of efforts by Ticky Burden and McMillen to mollify him.

Of his dazzling display at the end, he said: "Down-to-the-wire basketball, that's my game. When you've got the adrenalin flowing, you go with it and hope for the best. I got hungry and did the job. Why does that happen? I wish I knew. But as loog as the score comes out in our favor, that's cool." The victory, New York's fourth in five games, put the Knicks a notch over the .500 mark with a 16-15 wonlost record ond extended Atlanta's losing streak to five games.

"It was a miracle we won tonight," said Frazier. "I never got into the flow of the game. But Earl did it all and willed us though."

Rockets 93, Pacers 79

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 26 (AP)-John Johnson scored 16 of his 20 points in the second half tonight and led a balanced Houston attack to a 93-79 victory over the Indiana Pacers.

The Pacers, led by Billy Knight and Don Buse, jumped ahead by 8 points in the first quarter, but the Rockets moved in front in the second period and widened their lead to 14 points four times io the final quarter.

Calvin Murphy and John Lucas, the guards, scored 18 and 14 points, respectively, for Houston. Knight led Indiana with 20 points; Dave Robisch, a reserve, contributed 18 points, and Buse finished with 12 points, 13 assists and 5 steals.

Braves 103, Cavaliers 96 CLEVELAND, Dec. 26 (AP)-John Shumate converted a 3-point play, checking a Cieveland rally, and the Buffalo Braves beat the Cavaliers, 103-96, tonight. The Cavaliers trailed by 90-80, but cut the margin to 94-91 with 4:28 remaining. Shumate missed a shot, but a teammate, Don Adams, grabbed the rebound between two Cavaliers, passed to Shumate under the basket and the big center scored and was fouled.

Randy Schmidt led the winners with 25 points. The crowd of 9,633 was the smallest home turnout of the season for the Cavoliers.

Sabres Push Victory Streak to 8 With 5-2 Decision Over Capitals

BUFFALO, Dec. 26 (AP) - Andre Savard's goal broke a 1-1 tie and started a four-goal outburst in the second period that gave the Buffalo Sabres a 5-2 victory over the Washington Capitals in the National Hockey League

The Sabres tied a club record by winning their eighth consecutive game. Jim Lorentz put the Sabres ahead early in the opening period, taking a pass from Rick Martin and beating the Washington goalie, Ron Low. The Capitals tied the score before the end of the period on Rick Bragnolo's short-the period on Rick Bragnolo's short-handed goal.

Lee Fogolin took Gil Perreault's pass and made it 3-1, then Fred Stanfield knocked in a rebound of Brian Spencer's shot 40 seconds later. Spencer then scored on a short sbot after a pass

Ron Lalonde scored for Washington in the third period as he botted in a loose puck in front of the net.

Whalers 3, Fighting Saints 2 HARTFORO, Dec. 26 (AP)-Brett Callighen's first goal of his pro career proved decisive as the New England Whalers gained a 3-2 World Hockey Association triumph tonight over the Minnesota Fighting Saints.

Callighen's goal came on a rebound after Minnesota's goalie, Louie Levasseur, gambled by coming out of the net and lost. That made the score 2-1. Another Whaler rookie, George Lyle, was also instrumental in the victory as he scored his 22d and 23d goals of the season in the opening period. Bruins 6, Barons 3

BOSTON, Dec. 26 (AP)—Johnny Bucyk moved into fourth place among the National Hockey League's career scorers with his 545th goal tonight, as he beloed the Boston Bruins post a 6-3 victory over the Cleveland Barons. The 41-year-old Bucyk moved oast Maurice Richard in the standings.

The Bruins built a 4-1 first-period

Okay...so you can't tie your money up for years to earn higher interest.

Bet you could do it for just 90 days!

Citibank's Regular Golden Passbook pays 5.5% interest, higher than any day-to-day bank account. And does it in just 90 days!

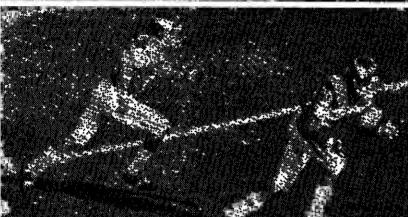

Citibank's Regular Golden Passbook is the perfect place for savings you don't need right away ... but still can't afford to tie up for long. Your money earns 5.50% in a Golden Passbook and needs to stay there for just 90 days. With daily compounding, your annual yield works out to 5.65%. You can withdraw money at the end of any quarter without loss of interest provided it has been on deposit at least 90 days.* All you need is $500 to open a Regular Golden Passbook Account. (That $500 deposit will also qualify you for a free Citibank Checking Account.) Come in to Citibank and start your Golden Passbook Account now. Ninety days from now, you'll be the richer for it!

Money on deposit less than 90 days earns no interest by law. To withdraw money without loss of interest before the end of a quarter, you must provide the bank with a 90-day written notice.

There's a hard way and an easy way. Citibank is the easy way.

"We had to get a first down," Ter-kenton explained. "I wasn't going to take any chances. I feit it was a high-percentage pass. Chuck was the fourth receiver I looked at."

Tarkenton earlier had called an audible on Foreman's 62-yard run that set up the Vikings' second touchdown.

Although bothered by a knee damaged in last week's playoff victory over the Washington Redskins, he com-pleted 12 of 27 passes for 143 yards. He often threw the bail away.

"I was throwing the ball where I wanted to," the Viking quarterback said. "The Ram defense is as good as any we've played."

But the Rams, arriving from Los Angeles on Friday into near-zero, cold, appeared uncomfortable in sunny 12degree weather.

Knox rated the weather as "beautiful" but through the years the Rams have never won a postseason game in a cold-weather city while losing six—one here for the N.F.C. title two years ago, another here in 1969, one in Milwaukee in 1967 and two in Cleveland in 1955 and 1950.

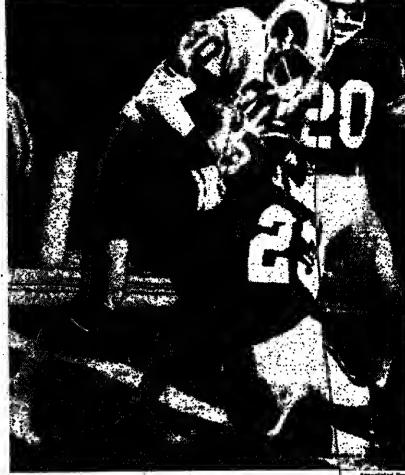

The Rams missed an opportunity to become the virtual home team in the Super Bowl at the Rose Bowl in two weeks. They also missed an opportunity to operate an all-California duel with the Raiders in the Super Bowl.

As for the Vikings, they will be play-ing their fourth different opponent in the Super Bowl game. They lost to Kan-sas City Chiefs in 1970, the Miami Dol-phins in 1974 and the Pittsburgh Steel-ers in 1975. And they got their wish when the Raiders dethroned the defending champion Steelers.

We want the whole world," Tarkenton said, "to know this time we're going to win the Super Bowl."

Gleeful Raiders Talk Of End to Frustration

OAKIAND, Calif., Dec. 26—"We've lived with the fact that we haven't been able to win 'the big one' for a long time," said Coach John Madden of the Oakland Raiders, dripping moisture over people's microphones. "And we felt it was time to disprove that."

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 26 (AP)-The University of Pittsburgh football team rolled into New Orleans this afternoon, still looking for a warm place to prac-tice for its Sugar Bowl date with Geor-

Ohioan Is Colorado Star

MIAMI, Dec. 26 (AP)—Had it not been for Colorado's scenic beauty, Don Hasselbeck likely would be suiting up for Michigan in the Rose Bowl next Saturday night. Instead, the 6-foot-7-inch, 240-pound tight end will play a key role for Colorado against Ohio

State in the Orange Bowl game.

Hasselbeck couldn't be happier. He's from Cincinnati, so the clash with the Buckeyes carries extra importance. "It's a thrill," said the Ohioan, who is eager to show Coloradans that the Buckeyes are human.

'People in Colorado put Michigan and Ohio State on a pedestal. I want to show them we have fine football in the West, too," he said, relaxing after

"I was all set to go to Michigan," recalled Hasselbeck. "Then I visited," Colorado thought it was fentastic out there. My parents thought I should give Michigan and Ohio State another chance to talk to me. But I signed when I came back."

His senior season has been disappointing to Hasselbeck, who broke his left hand in the ninth game. The all-Big Eight selection finished with only 14 receptions, II under his 1975 total. A cast has been taken off the fracture and the big end said, "Twe been squeezing a tennis ball regularly. It's all right."

His coach, Bill Mallory, relishes the idea of having a 100 percent Hasselbeck, "He's as fine a tight end as Tve ever been around. He's a good blocker and offers such a big target to throw to," said Mallory.

Crew From University of Paris Captures Nile Rowing in Upset

By NORMAN HILDES-HEIM

CAIRO, Dec. 26—The French entry, of the Nile gives the middle lanes a moderate advantage. The favorites for the race, Harvard and Oxford, drew the University of Paris, pulled a stun-ning upset victory today in the sixth annual Nile International Intercollegiate Rowing Festival.

The French had set their hopes no higher than a third-place finish in the six-boat final. They were fourth last Thursday at Ismailia in the first race of the series, trailing Oxford, Harvard, and Trinity College of Dublin, a full 15 seconds behind the winners.

Rowing in Lane 4 in the middle of the Nile today, Paris led the pack bome in the time of 5 minutes 38 seconds, three-tenths of a second in front of fast-closing Oxford.

Middle Lanes Favorable

All the differences in the borrowed equipment that caused so much discussion among the crews for the last two days were resolved by the time the oarsmen took to the water. Everyone felt the crews had comparable boats in which to race, and if any differences. existed it was in the rowing lanes, because the swift current in the center tions, Harvard got caught sleeping at the start, and Trinity firmly took the lead, which it held for the first 500 meters of this 2,000-meter course, With everyone watching to see what was bappening in the outside lanes, Paris inched ahead, and when the Frenchmen were finally noticed even the French official following the race in the un-pires' launch said, in effect: "It can't be the French crew in the lead, it must be one of the two Egyptian crews." Defying everyone, the French continued to stretch their lead, three seats at the 1,000-meter mark, six seats at the 1,500. And despite a game closing sprint by Oxford, which was hindered by a broken rudder sustained by the Britishers with 150 meters left in the race, the French pulled across the finish four seats up on their Channel neigh-bors, with Harvard a boat length down in third. None of the crews had any alibis for their results, and all were unanimous in their surprise and praise for the University of Paris victory.

Decline in Rolls at Jewish Schools Found Slowing

The dramatic overall decline in the number of students enrolled in Jewish echools is beginning to slow down, and one type of Jewish school-the full-time day school — is experiencing a steady growth, according to a report by the American Association for Jewish Education that was released recently. Jewish educators are wary of drawing over optimistic conclusions from these trends especially since the enrollment decline has not yet been reversed. But many see the trends as at least one sign that the movement away from traditional Jewish values may be subsiding.

In the United States, most Jewish education has traditionally been carried oo through part-time programs-either in the one-day-a-week "Hebrew schools" or in the two-to-five day a week afternoon

These two programs are still dominant, but much less so than before. A decade ago, the full-time schools accounted for only one of eight students enrolled in Jewish schools. Now they account for one

By contrast, the schools that are less than full time have suffered a drop in enrollment of about a third since 1966. The combination of these two factors produced an overall decline of 11 percent in the number of students enrolled in all types of Jewish schools between 1971 and 1975.

This figure compares favorably with the 18 percent drop experienced in the previous four-year period.

Despite their cautious optimism, many community leaders believe that the ef-fects of the long period of decay will

Robert W. Arnow, the president of the association, believes that a decline in the Jewish birth rate is largely responsible for the drop in school enrollment. This, he believes, "raises profound implications not only for Jewish education but also for all Jewish communal activity in the next generation."

A 'Classical' Pattern

The central issues for many Jews, bowever, remain secularization and cultural alienation, according to observers, and the way these forces are reflected in increasing rates of intermarriage. For Jewish leaders who have been opposing these trends, the rise of the day school is seen as a hopeful sign and a useful tool.

For Milton Himmelfarb, the director of research and information for the American Jewish Committee, the growing desire on the part of Jewish parents to enroll their children in full-time schools

ments and ultimate decontrol of rent en tirely. Mr. Elliott said be would recommend these decontrols to Mayor Beame but be did not indicate that be thought hey would be approved. Mr. Elliott said he also favored a reduction in state and city income taxes on high incomes, stating that the present rates discouraged companies from staying or locating here because their executives were reinctant to pay the high taxes.

New York City has lost 640,000 jobs in the private sector since 1969, and some sources have said that 140,000 may be lost by 1981. But Mr. Elliott said that the recovery plan could lead instead to an increase of 30,000 jobs. Other elements of the Mayor's recovery plan include an early-warning system to alert the city when businesses are moving away, and cutting of red tape to help businessmen with permits, license inspections and zoning changes. These were in previous city recovery plans.

Mr. Elliott conceded yesterday that the earlier plans had falled to halt the city's economic decline. But, he said, because some improvements in the city's economy have taken place this year, the city has to push ahead with a vigorous program to keep its economy alive.

Coleman to Get Plan The new plan, he said, is to be submitted soon to Transportation Secretary William Coleman. The plan is being pre pared by the Business Labor Working Group, headed by David Rockefeller, chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank, and Harry Van Arsdale, leader of the Central Labor Council. Mr. Coleman a month ago asked the group to submit a list of private projects worth at least $5 billion that could result from Federal approval of the longdelayed West Side Highway renovation. Sources close to Mr. Elliott said that the list of private projects could go as high Rhodes Suggests That 2 Persons Be Given Control of the G.O.P.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26 (AP)-The House Republican leader, John J. Rhodes of Arizona, has suggested a new system that would put two persons rather than one in charge of the Republican National

The committee is to meet in late Jannery to choose a successor to Mary Louise mith, who has resigned as chairman. Mr. Rhodes said that a person of national stature, such as Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, was needed to being resuscitate the Republican Party. But Mr. Simon and some other prominent Republicans, such as former Gov. John B. Connal ly of Texas, have said that they could not afford to cut their private business ties to be a full-time chairman.

The solution, Mr. Rhodes said in an interview, might be to split the job of chairman into two parts: one, which a prominent figure could fill, would be the speechmaker and fund-raiser; the other would be the full-time party organizer administrator.

There is a growing consensus among Orthodox, Conservative and Reform educators that the part-time schools did not perform adequately in this area. "Reform educators themselves have reached the conclusion that the one-day schools have not been effective," said Rabbl Isaac Toubin, the executive vice president of the association. Until recently, many American Jews, particularly those in the Reform movement, had opposed full-time schools on the ground that they promoted patterns of Jewish isolation.

Growing Concern

At the moment, however, the Reform movement has five full-time day schools in operation—all started in the last five years. And, despite reluctance on the part Jewish schools, the dispersion of the association's estimates; 80,000 students are enrolled in full-time schools, compared with about of some Reform congregations, the movement plans to open more day schools over the next several years.

that there are nonreligious factors at work in promoting the full-time day school. These include the decay of public-school systems in many cities and, in some cases, problems caused by racial integration of schools.

But Mr. Himmelfarb suggested that, while these factors belp account for decisions by some parents to withdraw their children from public schools, they do not necessarily explain why these parents then chose religious schools.

He noted that, a decade ago, parents who decided not to send their children to public schools often enrolled them in secular or Protestant private schools. Now, be said, many parents are turning to Jewish schools.

As a result, financing for Jewish educa-tion has become a major recipient of Jew-ish philanthropy, Rabbi Toubin said. He estimated that the amount raised for Jew-ish education had increased fivefold over

Overall, the association study estimated . enrollment in all types of Jewish schools nationwide to be 400,000, compared with 550,000 in 1966 and 600,000 in 1961, the

civilian can be sued for false arrest. There are just under 5,000 auxiliary police officers in the city. The Police Department, seriously undermanned, would like to see both their number and their duties expanded. The auxil-- iaries are, the department insists, its eyes and ears."

At the opposite pole is the Patrol-men's Benevolent Association, the police unioo. The auxiliaries "ara phony cops who are scabbing our jobs." said Dennis Weaviog, the P.B.A. president,

A bill has just been prefiled in the State Legislature that would create a temporary commission to study the role of the city's auxiliary police.

"The auxiliary police are entirely a creature of the Police Department." said Assemblyman Alfred A. DelliBovi, Democrat of Queens, who is author of the bill. "They set up the training and they deploy them. We need an outside study—by police-oriented people—but people outside the New York depart-

"The training is the main thing," Mr. DelliBovi added. "Even the auxiliaries are not happy with it. There is a heavy dropout rate and the screening is poor. We have to find them and learn how

"The Police Department uses the auxiliaries in a very deceptive way," said Howard Morse, a spokesman for the P.B.A. Their uniforms are indistinguishable from the police uniform to the layman, hut they are quite distin-guishable to the criminal community." (The auxiliaries wear a different shoulder patch).

"The man on the street has the delusion of security that doesn't exist," Mr. Morse said, "It is a cover-up hy the department to keep people from under-standing how really diminished police patrol really is."

"You can philosophize about it all you want," a Police Department spokesman said, "but until you get tha answers you need someone on the street. These peopla are willing to assume that responsibility. We know we don't have enough cops around, but what du we do in the meantime?

"A lot of the auxiliaries are dedicated New Yorkers. We'd be insane not to take advantage of their enthusiasm." Jean DeGangi is 25 years old and a sergeant in the auxiliary police. Two nights a week sha patrols the street of the Bushwick section of Brooklyn. "We doo't substitute for the uniformed men," Miss DeGangi said. "We help them out. I think that just our appear-ance oo the street is helpful."

Miss DeGangi, a member of the auxiliary police for four years, works in an office in the Empire State Building all day. "I love working with the po-lice," she said. "It's interesting work and you're always learning something

The oumber of policemen has dropped from 31,000 in November 1974 to 25.800 and the department predicts that the oumber will go below 25,000 next year, the lowest since 1965. The patrol commands have 1,500 fewer men assigned to them than a year ago, but, according to the department, other bureaus, such as detectives, narcotics, vice and organized crime, have been cut severely to bolster patrol.

While some auxiliary police officers operate emergency vehicles, boats in the harbor—usually their own—and work in mounted units in the parks, most of them are assigned to foot patrol. To qualify for an annual $75 uni-form allowance—the only money they get-the auxiliaries must put in 126 hours on duty each year. Most of them do four hours oo patrol one or two nights a week, usually from 8 P.M. to

Auxiliaries Have Association

In a few cities and in many smaller communities around the country auxiliary policemen are armed and are paid for their part-time service. John Hyland, president of the Auxiliary Police Be-nevolant Association, which represents about half of the auxiliary police, denied any plans to seek police powers and the right to carry guns.

"There is no way you could even consider it right oow," said Mr. Hyland, a switchman for the New York Telephona Company. "The screening would have to be tightened up 1,000 percent

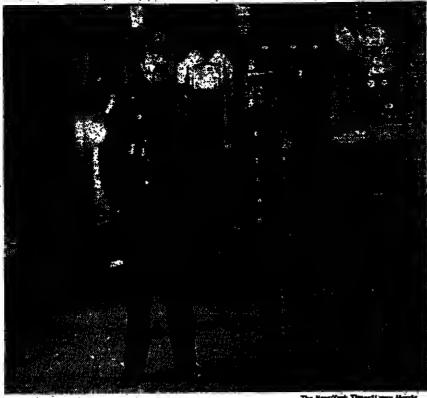

Both leaders of the auxiliary police and the city police acknowledged pri-vately that the auxiliary force is a magnet for some people with psychological problems. Said one precinct captain:
"A lot of them are immature or maybe unstable police buffs working out their fantasies by playing cop."

Asked about arming the auxiliary po-lice, another police official sald: "If you gave some of them peashooters, you'd.
be in trouble. A lot of them are just whackos who get their jollies by putting on a uniform and walking around

The auxillaries bitterly resent this attitude, hut friction between them and regular policemen is not new. In 1973, seven auxiliary police resigned when, they said, the regular police at the 104th Precinct in Queens failed to respond speedily to their call for assistance. They were attempting to break up a fight at a dance, they said.

Similarly, regular police officers complained last August that three auxiliaries stood by while three policemen were pummeled by an unruly crowd io Astoria, Queens. The policemen had been ticketing double-parked cars out-

William Vogel, an auxiliary who pa-trols out of the 112th Precinct in Forest Hills, Queens, sees oo conflict with the regular police. In fact, he would like to become one. "I've got my name on the list," he said. "but I've got no military time and I'm afraid that hy the time they get to me, I'll be too old." He is 28.

Mr. Vogel does what he calls "senior citizen patrol" on the nights he works. "It's mostly a question of visibility," he said. "The muggers see us on the corner and it scares them off. It's something I can do for my community," he said. "I was born here and I like

Recently, Assemblyman Alfred A. DelliBovi, a Queens Democrat, intro-duced a bill in the State Legislature that would create a temporary commission to study the role of the city's auxiliary police.

The auxiliary police are entirely a creature of the Police Department," Mr. DelliBovi said. "They set up the train-log and they deploy them. We need an outside study—by police-oriented people—but people outside the New York department

Training Held Important

"The training is the main thing," Mr. DelliBovi went on. "Even the auxiliaries are not happy with it. There is a heavy dropont rate and the screening is poor. We have to find out how to train them and how to use them."

Auxiliary policemen are controlled by their own superiors up through the rank of inspector. The auxiliary police commander in each precluct—he may be a sergeant or a lieutenant—works with a regular policeman designated by the regular precmet commander as auxiliary coordinator.

Most of the expenses incurred in ruooing the auxiliary police are met hy the Federal and state governments. This is because the auxiliaries are actually part of the state's civilian-defense apparatus, created in 1950 when many people considered nuclear attacks im-

According to the New York State Defense Emergency Act of 1950, the city would get 40,000 police auxiliaries, 150,000 air-raid wardens and 20,000 auxiliary firemen. The auxiliary police program dawdled along through the 1950's and early 1960's when it was virtually abandoned It was revived by Mayor Lindsay as part of his program to decentralize government. The auxiliaries were to work not of neighborhood offices and precincts. The Lindsay goal. 6,000 members, was achieved in 1974. The oumber has dropped off since then.

Mr. Hyland, the A.P.B.A. president blames lack of city cooperation and cites the case of one of his members who currently is being sued for $1-mil-lion for false arrest. The city told him he is on his own," Mr. Ryland said. Mr. Hyland, like critics of the auxiliaries, would like to see the training improved. Currently, the course is one night session a week for 14 weeks. "Our point is to train them so they are more than window dressing when they're on the street," he said. The P.B.A.'s Mr. Morse disagrees. "Even if you gave them adequate training, it would be inadequate," he said.

"Salesmen, plumbers, or whatever they are, you just can't turn them intoprofessional police officers. The department asked the auxillaries to pot in more time on patrol to combat attacks on the elderly," be went on. "That's police work and the only solution is to pot more professional policemen on the job."

"We agree wholeheartedly," the spokesman for the department said, "hut we cannot get any more police-men right now. And, until we can, we are very giad to have the auxiliaries on the joh."

Elderly New York City Resid Turnto Youth for Aid and Ad

Anita Hofmann, who is 65 years old and lives in the West Bronx, went to the nearby Hope of Israel Senior Citizens Center recently to get some help because a rock band that practices in the apartment above hers made so much ooise that she couldn't stand lt. On the same day, Florence Steinberg. went to the center to get help on a problem she had with her registration at the Board of Elections. The person both womeo went to for help was Jeffrey Moerdler, who is 19. While the city's sometimes forbidding bureaucracy and the crime and violence have left many of New York's 1.5 million elderly people isolated and anx-million elderly people isolated and anxious, this same predicament has also resulted in new programs that are attempting to help the elderly. For just as Mrs. Holmann and Mrs. Steinberg are being helped by someone born about half a century after they were, thousands of other elderly people throughout the city are she has efficient throughout the city are also benefiting from programs in which young people work for little or no pay.

Perhaps a dozen public schools have or are considering such projects and a number of nursing homes throughout the city also have them.

Mr. Moerdler, a junior at Columbia College, is one of 18 student volunteers in a paralegal program sponsored by the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. Each student usually spends one day a week at one of eight centers for the elderly in the Bronx, helping to resolve problems that include Medieaid, food stamps, rent control and survivor benefits.

Two Problems Resolved

"He acts as our lawyer," said Mrs. Steinberg, as she learned that the mis-takes in her registration—not of her own making—had been corrected. "All of our problems are solved by him." As for Mrs. Hofmann, her landlord said that he would try to resolve the noise problem.

Mr. Moerdler stresses that he does not give legal advice and that about one-fourth of his time is spent just giving reassurance." Nonetheless, the help he does provide—which includes referring the elderly to lawyers who can give legal advice and start court action—is greatly appreciated.

"Just the idea that someone is looking out for my welfare gives me a sense of feeling secure." Mrs. Hofmann said. "I over knew what to do about these kinds of things before. But now I feel a sense of belonging."

The paralegal program is one of a number of projects and agencies spon-sored by the Federation of Jewish Philanhropies in the metropolitan area that have young people working to aid the elderly. These pro-grams, which a spokesman said involve about 10,000 high-school and college student volunteers, include a ko-sher food cooperative, visits to the household, holiday gift packages and a traveling library.

Before it was known that he was suf-fering from cances. Mr. Hart amounced in June 1975 that he would not seek reelection when his term expired at the and of 1976, saying, "The time has come to chage at least this part of the guard." He was married to Jane Cameron Briggs, heiress to an automotive fortune, who became an outspoken critic of the war in Vietnam before her husband. She was arrested in 1969 for sitting in and praying at the Pentagon. He is said to have advised their eight children to "follow your conscience." His children asked him to prove a heard if the investigation of the control of the cont him to grow a beard if he won the 1970 election, and he did so.

"Man of the Year," a title coined by TIME in 1927, has become an event of traditional news value for 50 years now. The editors' first selection was Charles Lindbergh and their latest is President-elect Jimmy Carter. In between these two men is a fascinating roster of the mighty and the memorable—the makers of peace and war, the prophets, merchants and creators, the rebels and kings, the heroes of the age or of the moment.

Each year TIME's choice is applauded, decried, publicly quoted and privately debated.

"Man of the Year" is neither an accorde nor a moral judgment. (Al Capone was numer-up in riotous, bootleg 1928.) The two criteria are always these: who had the biggest rise in fame; and who has changed the character of the times, possibly the course of history, for better or worse.

As the editors put if this week. Because of his impressive rise to power, because of the new phase he marks in American life, and because of the great anticipations that surround fun, James Earl Carter Jr. is TIME's 'Man of the Year.'
